Roosevelt's Challenge Is Accepted by Republicans

G.O.P. Chairman Agrees to New Deal Issue in Election.

Says Party Will Halt 'Radicalism'

Hits Administration as Government by Bureaucracy.

The Republican party, through its new National chairman, Henry P. Fletcher, last night accepted the New Deal as the issue in the coming Congressional campaign.

Speaking over a Nation-wide radio hook-up, the new Republican spokesman, in his first extended utterance, took up the Administration's challenge to go to the country for a vote of confidence.

"The Republican party," he said, "accepts the issue of the New Deal. It will seek to return to Congress enough members to oppose effectively these innovations. We believe we will be successful in this."

The new chairman made his bow on the National political stage in a bare-fisted attack replying directly to President Roosevelt's Nation-wide address last week. He drew the line for a straight out fight which forecasts one of the most stirring Congressional election battles in years.

Claims Policy Repudiated.

"The New Deal" is government, from above," Mr. Fletcher said. "It is based on the proposition that the people can not manage their own affairs and that a Government bureaucracy must manage for them. That proposition, after centuries of trial in Europe and its attempted transference to America, was repudiated and repudiated again today. It was on July 2, 1776, that the Independence resolution was adopted in Philadelphia.

"In spite of lip service to Democratic ideals, the leaders of the party in power know in their hearts that 'The New Deal' is not democratic. It does not come from the people.

"The campaign we are now entering upon for the election of one-third of the Senate and the entire House of Representatives is one of the most important political campaigns waged in this country since the foundation of our Government.

Grandson of Oil King to Marry

Laurence S. Rockefeller, Miss Mary French to Wed in August.

New York, July 2 (P).—The engagement of Laurence Spelman Rockefeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to Miss Mary French was announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John French, of New York and Greenwich, Conn.

Miss French, a graduate of Rosemary Hall, attended Vassar for two years. Since leaving Vassar, she has been studying sculpture at the Art Students League in New York.

She is a member of the New York Junior League and the Cosmopolitan Club.

Her father is a retired New York lawyer.

Rockefeller, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has just finished his first year at Harvard Law School. He is a graduate of Princeton, where he was a member of the Ivy Club.

The wedding will take place in August.

Rockefeller, as were his brothers, was reared with the education. His father sought to have all of the Rockefeller children reminded as little as possible of their wealth.

He is seldom seen in night clubs and is said by his friends to be very studious.

Boy, 8, on Bicycle, Is Killed by Auto

Crashes at Klinge and New Mexico Avenue.

King Walton, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Walton, Jr., of 433 E. Klinge street, northwest, was killed instantly when struck by an automobile as he rode his bicycle at Klinge road and New Mexico avenue early last night.

The car was driven by Miss Mary Lenihan, 19, daughter of James J. Lenihan, of 4000 Cathedral avenue. She was taken to the Eighth Precinct, but was released a short time later in custody of her attorney, William Leahy, on orders of Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald. Time for the inquest has not been fixed.

Police were told the boy had just reached the corner and had turned his bicycle into New Mexico avenue at a rapid rate when the automobile hit him. His father is an attorney for the Department of Justice.

Maniac Terrorizes Steel Mill; 3 Slain

3,000 Workers Panic-Stricken After Latest Attack of Phantom Killer; Scores of Guards Eluded in Flight.

Steubenville, Ohio, July 2 (P).—Terror lurks again in the dark recesses of the five-square mile mill-yard of the Wheeling Steel Corporation.

A kill-crazy maniac, the slayer of three workmen, is at large, chasing his phantom shadow over the plant and its 3,000 employees.

Suddenly and stealthily, like a fox, the killer struck for the third time early today while scores of special guards patrolled the mill-yard.

He fired four times, killing two workmen. Then he fled, halting momentarily beneath a light to jump instantly up and down and, said the workers who saw him, to "creech like an ape," in signal of his latest kill.

Leaving panic behind, the man, who dresses like a laborer, dashed toward the Ohio River and vanished.

The workers who saw him said he was short and stocky and, possibly middle aged.

He left only confusion among company and county officials who for six months have sought to track him down.

"We don't know where to begin," said Prosecuting Attorney Hooper. "We don't know whether the killer is a maniac, a disgruntled former employee, or possibly some one plotting against the company."

Hooper and city and county officials spent the day questioning workers who were on the night shift. They said they would question every one of the 2,000 men.

There was a report all of the workers who were on the night shift were questioned.

War Veteran Found Slain In Virginia

Police Seek Man Said to Have Admitted Killing Near Leesburg.

Leesburg, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—With his skull crushed and the pockets of his trousers turned inside out, the body of Basil Brown, 40, disabled World War veteran, was found today in a ravine on the farm of Richard Cooper, near Lucketta, about 9 miles from Leesburg.

On the strength of a statement said to have been made to police here by Cooper's wife, a search was instituted for Clarence Barnhouse, the woman's stepfather, who lives with the Coopers, but he had not been located early tonight.

Mrs. Cooper is quoted as saying Barnhouse told her last night that he had killed Brown and asked her to wash bloodstains from his shirt. The garment is held by Sheriff E. S. Adrian.

Body Found by Cooper.

The finding of the body was reported this morning by Cooper. He said he was on his way to work at Waterford and that he saw the body lying in underbrush. He did not want to tell his wife, he said, because she was in a hurry, but notified authorities when he arrived at Waterford.

Brown, who lived about two miles from the home of the Coopers, Barnhouse and several others are said to have been present at a drinking party at the Cooper home last night. Brown, it is said, recently received a monthly check of $100 from the Government. Only a few cents were found in his pockets when authorities examined the body.

Police reported finding a pool of blood about 50 feet from the Cooper house and there were blood stains leading to where the body was found. They also reported finding a blood-stained ax handle near the pool of blood. Blood stains also

Random Shot Kills Talker; Man Held

Loud Argument Prevented Sleep, Assailant Says.

Lynchburg, Va., July 2 (P).—A random shot, fired in the dark in an effort to halt some loud talking, killed a man here last night and landed another in jail under a murder charge.

Oscar Shelton, 24, Lynchburg, told officers he fired when Houston Little, 18, Schoolfield, and Roy Hicks, Lynchburg, stopped near his home and engaged in an argument. Shelton said he was unable to sleep and fired once "to scare them." His bullet struck Little in the back, fatally wounding him.

Romance Believed on Rocks As Fiermonte Returns to Ring

New York, July 2 (P).—Enzo Fiermonte, the Italian Adonis who forsook the prize ring to marry the former Mrs. John Jacob Astor, came back to it today. And between the lines was every indication that the famous romance was as solid as he hopes Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion, will be when he gets through with him.

As handsome a man as boxing ever saw, Enzo came back with a willingness that seemed to amount almost to relief.

"I don't give a damn if Mrs. Fiermonte does object to my fighting—I'm going to fight," he said. "I'm going to wear the pants in my house even if they're only fighting trunks."

He sat in Jimmy Johnston's office in the boxing headquarters in Madison Square Garden and talked with a ease and in a relaxed way that more than his words. To all queries regarding reports that he and Mrs. Fiermonte had separated, he answered: "As far as I am concerned every-

J.P. Kennedy Heads Stock Control Body

Pecora Takes Oath After Making Objections to Chairman.

Commission Has Two Months to Draft Program.

By Robert C. Albright.

Joseph P. Kennedy, of New York, personal friend of the President and a well-known Wall street trader, yesterday was elected chairman of the new Securities and Exchange Commission after preliminary differences among members.

Kennedy's selection followed a two-hour debate over the chairmanship, during which Ferdinand Pecora, prosecutor in the Senate's stock market investigation, belatedly decided to serve under Kennedy.

Pecora, who was reported unwilling to accept appointment unless he was named chairman, arrived late at the Federal Trade Commission. He was immediately closeted with Commissioner James M. Landis, one of the five appointed to the exchange body.

Later Kennedy joined the two, while the two Republican appointees, Robert F. Healy, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, and George R. Matthews, a member, awaited in an adjacent office.

Photographers and newspapermen, invited to attend the "swearing in" ceremonies at 3 p. m., waited around until after 5 for the group to organize.

Election Announced.

Chairman Kennedy, announcing his own election, denied there had been a "disagreement," but admitted the chairmanship "was discussed, along with other matters." He said his selection was unanimous.

While selection of a chairman nominally was left to the new commission, the President is known to have expressed his preference for Kennedy.

Pecora, keen-eyed, swarthy Sicilian-born lawyer, whose disclosures before the Senate Banking Committee substantially paved the way for stock exchange control legislation, did most of the talking at the commission's first formal press conference, following his swearing-in.

He refused to confirm or deny reports that he came to Washington expecting to be chairman of the commission.

"I came here expecting to be ON the commission," he said.

Roosevelt Ship Speeds South

Cruiser Houston Ahead of Schedule on Trip to Puerto Rico.

Aboard the U. S. S. Gilmer, accompanying President Roosevelt, July 2 (P).—President Roosevelt rode the blue waters of the Atlantic tonight well on his way to Puerto Rico.

A fast run today put him ahead of schedule, and the warm Gulf Stream was crossed just off Cape Hatteras. The President went on deck to enjoy the bright sunshine and air as the cruiser Houston plowed through the waves at 18 to 20 knots.

The President was awakened this morning with the firing of the 21-gun Presidential salute by the Houston. The salute was given today because he was piped aboard last night at Annapolis after sundown.

Constant communication with the White House was maintained by wireless during the day, but there was no evidence of much business after last week's clearing up of state affairs.

The President took it easy most of the day, reading, resting and basking in the sun.

Son Kills Mother In English Dispute

Schoolboy Uses Shotgun Rather Than Study.

Coral Gables, Fla., July 2 (P).—Because 15-year-old Harry Ray Shays' mother insisted he study English, a subject he failed in at the last semester, the boy, police said, shot and killed her.

The mother, Mrs. Nina D. Shays, 40, was fatally wounded when struck in the back by a shotgun charge while working in the flower garden at her home.

He showed no emotion in jail told his mother was dead.

Resignation of Saito Cabinet Is Predicted

Tokyo, July 2 (P).—Resignation of the cabinet of Premier Makoto Saito was predicted in political quarters and newspapers today as the army and navy showed signs of pressing for a more militaristic government.

Well informed observers, however, appeared to be of the opinion that the Emperor would appoint Saito to form a new government in event of resignations.

Army Leaders To Be Called In Fee Probe

Companies Which Engaged Col. McMullen Also Paid Others.

By Frank Getty.

A number of high ranking Army officers will be called before the House Military Affairs Investigating Committee soon to testify as to whether they had accepted fees from New York firms while on active duty.

The same firms which engaged the services of Col. Joseph I. McMullen, of the judge advocates general's staff, were revealed yesterday as having paid money to other officers.

Representative Kvale (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, the only member of the investigating group remaining in Washington, today will question in executive session an official of one of the New York concerns.

If it develops that fees were accepted by the suspected officers for services in connection with transactions in which the Government had an interest, other committee members will return to the city later this week to hear any explanation that may be forthcoming.

Kvale made it clear last night that no officer will be accused without being given an opportunity immediately to clear his name, in case his activities have not been in violation of the criminal code. The committee has information that the officers in question have accepted fees, but the possibility that these might have been for services during leaves of absence was admitted.

Nine Probers Aid Kvale.

A representative of the Atwater Kent company, which paid Col. McMullen several thousand dollars, will testify at this morning's secret hearing.

Another firm which admitted engaging the colonel's services while he was on duty in the Judge Advocate General's department is the Cuban-American Manganese Co. Investigators believe this company also had other officers on its pay roll.

Representative Kvale now is working with nine investigators assigned to two House committees by the General Accounting Office, the Department of Justice and the War Department. Leads developed when Col. McMullen admitted receiving fees from the New York firms in question pointed to a number of other officers, it developed yesterday.

Kvale yesterday issued a formal statement regarding the House committee's charges against Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, and its demand for his removal as Chief of Air Corps.

"That Gen. Foulois sincerely believed the charges against him were unfounded," he said.

Washingtonian's Father Killed in Staunton Plant

Staunton, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—Clifton H. Harris, 63, was killed today when the main flywheel in the engine room of the Basic Manufacturing Co.'s plant burst, hurling pieces as far as 600 feet through the roof of the building.

Officials were unable to explain the accident, which caused a partial shutdown. Harris is survived by his wife and seven children, among whom is Mrs. Walter Jardine, of Washington.

Rebels Tried By Nazis in 3 Minutes

Member of Firing Squad Whispers Story of Execution of 60.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 2.—The story of how 60 rebellious Storm Troopers were executed with unbandaged eyes in an old cadet school in a Berlin suburb was told today by a man who obviously was a member of Chancellor Hitler's firing squad.

The man, a member of the Schutz Staffel, special black-shirted guards, whispered his story of 60 executions after making certain that no eavesdropper could hear.

Before the execution, there was a trial for each "traitor" before a court of three men, under the chairmanship of Heinrich Himmler, chief of secret police. Another judge was a high ranking officer of the Schutz Staffel and another came from the Reichswehr (Army).

Each man was given three minutes before the judges, and each was sentenced to death, although some were given an opportunity to commit suicide.

"The men were judged and condemned in three minutes," said the witness, "and were disposed of shortly after that."

"From the tribunal they were taken before the firing squad as the drums rolled to drown out the shots."

All died without bandages over their eyes—all refused to be blinded. "Ernst and Strasser (Karl Ernst, Storm Troop leader, and Gregor

London, July 2 (P).—The controversy over the smiling portrait of Marion Davies which hangs in the American pavilion at the Biennial Art Exhibition in Venice brought orders today for the removal of the entire American exhibit of the Whitney Museum.

Mrs. Juliana R. Force, director of the museum, cabled to a New York broker handling the shipping and packing of pictures, ordering the removal of all the 100 or more paintings comprising the exhibit.

The order was in apparent disregard of a decision by Count Volpi, head of the biennial show, that both the portrait and its American companions will remain on exhibit.

Mrs. Force explained at length her position.

"It was agreed," she said, "that the (Whitney) museum should have the sole right to select pictures which were to make up this exhibit and that only pictures by contemporary American artists were to be chosen."

On May 12 it was informed that after the exhibition had been installed the authorities in Venice introduced into the American pavilion a painting not owned by the

Nations Accept Roosevelt Plan To Curb Arms

Check on Manufacture and Traffic in Munitions Is Hailed as Success.

Geneva, July 2 (P).—President Roosevelt's plan to curb the secret collection of armaments by striking at munitions sources was enthusiastically approved today by a committee of the Disarmament Conference.

Powers represented on the committee investigating manufacture and traffic in arms adopted a plan based on American suggestions which would bring into the glare of publicity all armaments, home-made or imported.

A draft of the proposal will be sent to all governments with a view to incorporation in the general disarmament treaty. If the project finds eventual universal adoption, as hoped by the committee, every gun and piece of war material will be registered internationally.

The plan provides for the strictest inspection and supervision. Under its provisions, adhering nations would undertake to prohibit the manufacture of forbidden arms and traffic in them above limits laid down by a general treaty. Licenses would be required for all manufactures and exports of arms.

The plan specifically provides in the case of Germany that rearmament must be carried out by stages. American Ambassador to Switzerland Hugh Wilson, announcing acceptance of the American plan, said it would be "an important contribution to that security which looms so large in the eyes of so many nations."

A representative of Venezuela said it would "go down in history as a great success."

Thundershowers Today; Mercury Hit 93 Yesterday.

Washington today should find relief from the heat which has gripped the Nation for the past fortnight, as cooling thundershowers this afternoon and a cooler night are promised by the Weather Bureau. Similar relief was in sight for scattered sections of the country.

A close, clammy heat beat on the city's sidewalks and thoroughfares at noon. The temperature stood at 88 and mounted to 93 at 3 p. m., enduring at that mark until 7 p. m. Fair and cooler weather was assured by the weather man for July Fourth.

The only heat prostration of the day fell to the lot of Policeman A. J. Loftus, 28, of 1339 Monroe street northwest, who fell a dizzy spell coming over as he rode in his patrol car. He drove to Georgetown University Hospital, received treatment and went home.

Thundershowers were predicted today for New York, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois and Kansas. The Kansas drought, temporarily relieved over much of the State, again was growing serious. Federal meteorologists said.

Jealous Husband Kills 3 and Himself

Former Wife, Her Son and Mother Victims.

Dallas, Tex., July 2 (P).—A crazed fisherman invaded a home here today and, with bursts from a pump shotgun, killed his former wife, her son and her mother, then killed himself.

The victims were Hugh Davis, 59, who drove from his fishing camp to his former wife's home to commit the deed; Mrs. Sallie Carson, 49, his former wife; Mrs. Julia Patrick Monroe, 70, her mother; and Sam Carson, 19, Mrs. Carson's son by a former marriage.

Investigators said Davis probably was crazed by jealousy. He had asked his former wife to visit him at his fishing camp yesterday, but she had not done so.

Hindenburg Takes A Hand in Crisis

Ill President Orders Army to Protect Hitler Critic.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, July 2.—Hundreds of persons have been summarily executed in Adolf Hitler's ruthless suppression of revolt in Nazi ranks, a reliable source stated tonight, as the full significance of the party's "blood purge" became more evident.

More than 60 persons were shot down in Berlin alone, said this authority, indicating that previous reports that only a score or so fell were far short of the real tally.

The government, which has been promising an "amnesty" list of those executed, today again postponed giving it out when it had been expected.

Those executed were given a three-minute trial before three judges, an eyewitness, who obviously was a member of the firing squad of eight, revealed tonight.

Blindfolded Refused.

The "traitors" executed in this manner presented all refused bandages for their eyes and faced the squad, one of them with the cry of "hell Hitler, hell Germany!"

Secure thus far in his position, Hitler prepared to consolidate himself and his colleagues by forcing from power the majority of the conservatives, Vice Chancellor Von Papen.

An authoritative source said that Von Papen, a staunch friend of President Von Hindenburg, a devout Catholic and a critic of many Nazi policies, will go out of office tomorrow.

Present plans, said this informant, call for elevation to the vice-chancellorship of Herman Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and copurser with Hitler in Saturday's suppression of "traitors."

The president of the Reich warned that Von Papen must not be harmed. The bluff, soldierly president, regarded 24 hours ago as a sick old man, exposed his iron hand to the afford in a fresh linen suit, said the commission did little more at its first meeting than discuss "general policies."

He said their "first job" will be location of quarters, and the hunt will start this morning.

The next task, he said, will be completion of organization, which is not expected to exceed the size of the Federal Trade Commission's present securities division, with a staff of about 100.

"Parrying reporters' questions, Pecora rather than Kennedy quickly became the center of the conference. The Senate's Wall Street prosecutor frequently broke in to answer queries put to Kennedy, when the latter hesitated.

To Formulate Rules.

Pecora said he thought the commission would proceed to formulate rules and regulations governing the stock exchange. He said he considered the legislation under which they were operating "the most important in the last quarter of a century."

Pecora, who accepted the appointment for one year only, intimated he may not remain with the commission that long.

"I am going to try to stay the entire year," he told reporters. "But if I consulted purely my own interests and those of my family, I could not stay 24 hours. The 18 months I have spent with the Senate Banking Committee has been at a severe financial sacrifice. As soon as possible, I plan to return to private practice."

Pecora originally is known to have opposed the chairmanship of Kennedy, who figured as a participant in pool operations uncovered by the Senate Banking Committee, sharing at one time in a $395,238 profit in a Libby-Owens Securities Corporation syndicate.

In the two hours preceding Pecora's decision to take the oath, Kennedy is said to have satisfied the Senate's Wall Street prosecutor of his fitness for the job. All five of the new members were sworn in by Edna B. Vincell, Federal Trade Commission secretary.

Kennedy, who contributed substantially to the Democratic campaign coffers and who had the support of Postmaster General James A. Farley and the friendship of the President, takes office knowing he will be "on the spot" at least in the first few months of his service.

Two Months' Grace.

Although preliminary regulatory rules will be drafted immediately, the new commission has more than two months to lay an effective foundation for its work, as major sections of the act do not take effect until September 1 and October 1.

Kennedy and Landis will confer this morning with Secretary of Interior Ickes in an effort to decide on quarters.

Selection of a general counsel is one of the important decisions that must be made by the commission in the next few days. Benjamin Cohen, member of the Administration's "brains trust," and one of the corps of Government lawyers who wrote a large part of the new act, is being prominently mentioned for the job.

U. S. Resource Board Chosen To Aid Farmer

Roosevelt Acts to Remove Families Now Living on Eroded Land.

A new national planning board, to draft a program for better utilization of land, water and other natural resources, was set up under an executive order issued at the White House yesterday. One of its problems will be the relocating of millions of farm families living on worn out, eroded lands.

The board will prepare a program and plan of procedure, to be submitted to the President, dealing with all aspects of the problem of development and use of land, water and other natural resources, in their physical, social, governmental and economic aspects," a White House statement said.

This board will replace the National Planning Board and will take over its personnel, duties and records. It is directed to report on December 1. It also supercedes the Committee on National Land Problems.

Old-Age Pensions Pushed.

Last week the President appointed a Committee on Economic Security, to draft plans for old-age pensions, relief, insurance against occupational hazards and related social welfare questions.

With these two boards, President Roosevelt will have data at hand when Congress meets in January, so that he can if he desires, present a coordinated program of reconstruction in furtherance of his announced object of achieving a "more abundant life."

Personnel of the new National Resources Board will include the Secretary of the Interior as chairman, the Secretary of War, the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, Frederic A. Delano, Charles F. Merriam and Wesley C. Mitchell. The last three, who have been on the National Planning Board, will constitute an advisory committee.

Erosion Ruling Land.

"An example of the major problems facing the new board, there is the imperative need of saving those lands of the country now being rapidly turned into virtual deserts, through wind and water erosion, and the relocation of those who are trying to wrest a living from this rapidly deteriorating land," the White House statement said.

$1.50 Tax Rate Kept Here Another Year

Donovan, Declaring More Revenue Will Be Needed in 1935-36, Urges Commission to Hunt for New Sources.

A tax rate of $1.50 on each $100 of assessed value of taxable real estate and tangible personal property for the fiscal year 1935 was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners on recommendation of District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

In his report, Donovan sounded a warning of a strong probability of an increase in the tax rate for the fiscal year 1936. Had it not been for the surplus of $4,348,524, in unobligated tax revenues, brought over from the last year, it would not have been possible to continue the $1.50 rate, he said.

At the end of the present fiscal year, he warned, the revenue surplus will be about $29,363.

"This means," he said, "that the fiscal year 1936 will commence with practically no surplus, and the District must depend wholly upon current revenues for that year in framing the budget."

Suggests New Revenue Sources.

"And this, in turn, raises the question of the sufficiency of the Federal contribution and whether or not new sources of revenue should not be devised—through legislation—to keep from increasing the tax load now carried by real property. These are matters which might very well be considered at the time the Commissioners hold their public hearings on the budget for the fiscal year 1936."

The savings to real estate owners through the reduction of the tax rate from $1.70 to $1.50 for the fiscal year 1935 amounts to $4,600,000, and through the reduction of the assessed value of real estate there is a saving of $1,566,000, a total saving of $6,166,000, he said.

If the savings to owners of taxable tangible personal property and motor vehicles be included, he said, the total savings would amount to more than $6,500,000. Savings to water users through the 10 per cent discount in 1934 and the 25 per cent discount in rates with the increase in metered allowance in 1935 amounts to $700,000. This makes an aggregate saving, to the taxpayer for the two years of about $7,200,000, he said.

Puts Limit on Relief.

The ability to maintain a tax rate of $1.50 for the 1934-35 fiscal year, he said, takes into consideration not only the collection of the estimated revenues, but also the following: That no additional estimated appropriations will be made from District revenues for emergency relief; that the remaining 5 per cent salary cut will not be restored during the fiscal year; that new legislation involving large appropriations will not be passed during the year, and that large expenditures for park and playground purposes will not be made under the provisions of the Capper-Crampton act.

The total amount appropriated by the 1935 District Appropriations act is $35,411,177.94. This amount is made up of $31,769,380.94 payable from the general revenues of the District (including the Federal payment), and $3,641,797.00 from revenues payable from the gasoline tax and water funds.

The estimated assessed valuation of taxable real estate for 1935 is $1,125,000,000, as compared with $1,108,222,222 for 1934. The estimated value of tangible personal property is $85,000,000, as compared with $82,769,721 for 1934, and the assessment for intangible personal property for 1935 is $420,000,000, as compared with $410,431,538 for 1934.

Donovan's Statement.

"The fiscal year 1935 starts with the revenue surplus of $4,348,524 brought over from the fiscal year 1934," Donovan reported said. "The estimates of appropriation charges and other obligations payable by the District—and of the District's revenue ability for 1935 are modified in this report as compared with the estimated figures used here before. The present estimates are worked out on the basis of congressional action on the budget and the passage of new legislation. The earlier revenue estimates for 1935 have been recomputed on the actual experience of 11 months of the fiscal year 1934, and on other later information."

"The following statement shows in the first column the estimated figures (based on the budget submission) used before the congressional committees, and in the second column the estimates are newly prepared as of the date of this report."

Richberg Rules As Emergency Agencies' Boss

Coordination of Offices His New Job; "Acting President" Denied.

agency, headed by Mr. Richberg, to keep affairs running smoothly as possible until President Roosevelt returns. Suggestions that Mr. Richberg would function as an unofficial acting president were emphatically denied by him and by other Administration officials.

Just a year ago when President Roosevelt went on a vacation cruise, Dr. Raymond Moley passed word that Bernard M. Baruch would be "acting president" during the Roosevelt vacation, and though it was not correct, the mere suggestion stirred up a protest which officials do not want repeated.

Richberg Seen as "Hub."

While Mr. Richberg has some plans for speeches and a vacation this month, some here last night expected that within a short time he would be in the "dog days" around which the recovery machine revolved.

Mr. Richberg's job appears to be more one of coordination, ironing out disputes and conflicts among emergency agencies, and general keeping of Washington on an even keel during the "dog days." Yet there is enough latitude—he is made the direct contact with the President in this set-up—for an able, diplomatic man who knows the recovery machinery, to just about wring his neck.

The New Dealer Richberg has been lifted out of his position as legal adviser to Gen. Johnson and placed in a key position with the opportunity to throw some of the most important cogs of the recovery machinery into gear and make them function in closer relation to each other.

For instance, FERA set relief allowances in the South at a figure higher than some of the minimum wages fixed in NRA codes. Gen. Johnson and Harry Hopkins have never seen eye to eye on this problem. There is a job for Mr. Richberg.

A Smooth Diplomat.

Gen. Johnson and Secretary Perkins have hit different notes. Mr. Richberg is a position now to mediate. Although he is 100 per cent for the "Roosevelt revolution," he is as pleasant and conciliatory as a European diplomat and it is expected he will be able to smooth a few many ruffled feelings which have been left in the wake of Gen. Johnson.

As Mr. Richberg sees the industrial emergency committee part of his job, it is essentially one of dealing with NRA, emergency relief, FWA and labor disputes in which all three are concerned.

"It is a small committee for an intensive job on industrial relations in collaboration with the emergency council," Mr. Richberg said. "It is a job of making a study so that by the time the President comes back we will have a program of cooperation. I haven't any plans just now. We will try to work out a study of coordinating activities."

This committee will make recommendations to the President and the balance is made up of joint communication with the President on such matters.

To Specialize on Industry.

"In connection with the coordinating activities of the emergency council, this committee will do a special job on industrial relations, and on the cooperation of the industrial policy—that's the particular job. We will function as to recommendations on any matters which might be regarded as joint, rather than special problems."

The executive and emergency councils will meet every two weeks, the first meeting being set for July 10, Mr. Richberg said. The industrial committee has arranged no meeting time, but is expected to function continuously. Mr. Richberg expects to move at once into the office of Mr. Walker in the Commercial National Bank Building. His leave from NRA extends to September 1, but no date is fixed for the return of Mr. Walker, and Mr. Richberg's tenure is indefinite. His salary from NRA will be continued.

Terrific Pace Takes Its Toll, But Johnson Won't Ease Up

By Frederick C. Othman (United Press Staff Correspondent).

The toughest job within the New Deal has left its indelible mark upon Brig. Gen. Harold S. Johnson. The high commander of American business, keeper of the Blue Eagle and stormy petrel of the Administration, has been through a constant mental and physical strain such as few men would have survived.

Even the robust Johnson has been to the hospital three times since the National Recovery Administration was organized, once for boils, once for an abscess and once for a week's rest, which lasted two days and consisted of dictating orders from his bed.

There have been no holidays for Johnson, not even a peaceful night's sleep, nor a Sunday in the country. He has worked seven days a week and has labored into the wee hours practically every night. The physical and mental reaction upon him has been inevitable.

Face Pale and Creaked.

No longer is he the trim, almost jovial Army officer in multi. He has had no time for exercise and so has gained at least 30 pounds. Most of his clothes are too tight for him.

No longer is his eye gray and piercing. It still pierces, often flickers fire, but it is red-rimmed most of the time from lack of sleep. He writes in a current magazine article that he realized before he took the National Recovery Administration he would be known as a failure 18 months later. The general is modest.

Critics Praise Him.

Even his bitterest critics, those who insist the NRA is leading America to goodness knows what, admit that he has done a magnificent job and say that the magnitude of putting 2,500,000 separate businesses under codes would have floored most people.

Johnson put the Blue Eagle into practically every business house in America, and hoped a National organization to supervise the NRA's affairs and made changes in the conduct of industry which the experts think will carry on for generations.

His immediate task is reorganization of the NRA on a permanent basis. First, however, he intends to make a Nation-wide speaking tour. His friends had expected he might relax during the trip, but when they learned he intended to be on the road 20 days and make 35 speeches, their hopes were dashed. They have stopped trying to reason with him about his health.

G. O. P. Accepts New Deal Issue

Chairman Fletcher Takes Up Challenge of Roosevelt.

As Lincoln said at Gettysburg in the midst of the Civil War, we are engaged in a contest to see whether Democratic Government can survive here. Strange as it may seem to some, the Republican party in this campaign will be fighting for Democracy—the inalienable right of the people to govern themselves. In the broader aspect that is just what this contest means.

Praises Emergency Work.

"With the acts of the Administration which were consistent with a democratic form of government, and with sound economic principles, the Republican party did not and could not, under our system of Government, protest. The emergency measures of relief we did not obstruct. The Republican party was then, as it is now, just as anxious as the Democratic party to reduce unemployment. The President had our full cooperation in all that looked to a betterment of conditions. But when the party in power began to tamper with our monetary system and to set up bureaucratic agencies with complete control of industry and agriculture, we began to doubt. We did not doubt the honesty of their intentions, but we did seriously question the soundness of most of the hastily devised recovery measures. In the face of their overwhelming majorities in the House and Senate, criticism was useless, moreover it was denounced as unpatriotic and obstructive."

"For over a year the Administration has had a free hand. The Congress which has just adjourned gave to the President unlimited powers over the lives and fortunes of our people and the President in turn, delegated these powers to a vast and bewildering maze of administrative agencies. It is this departure from Democratic principles and all that is distinctively American that is called 'The New Deal.'"

Mr. Fletcher said he was unable to analyze the New Deal measures in detail last night, but he promised full discussion during the campaign.

Sees Credit Peril.

"Seventeen years ago the American Government sent 2,000,000 men to war in Europe and nearly 100,000 men to their graves and hundreds of thousands more to a maimed and disabled existence, to maintain the dignity of a contract," he continued. "Yet one of the first acts of the Roosevelt Administration was to repudiate and nullify one of the most solemn contracts this Government ever made—a contract, moreover, made with its own citizens who accepted it in good faith and in reliance on the good faith of their own Government. This was and is a very serious thing, for true democracy depends not only on the consent, but primarily on the confidence of the governed."

"Under the influence and inspiration of that example, laws have been passed taking the property of our citizens without compensation, and 'suspending' the obligation of contracts. Unless this tendency is checked, I fear all contracts as between private parties will be increasingly difficult of enforcement. If private credit is shaken, by acts of the Government—the Government's own credit is endangered."

"The Government has already practically taken control of our banking system and monopolizes the money market. In this the New Deal is perfectly logical because as it seeks to control all production it must control the money market. It controls the credit on which production is based. Don't imagine for one moment that the New Dealers are dumb and that they do not know what steps and measures they must take to put their theories into practice."

Artificial Recovery.

"When we consider the wide range of power and authority over industry and agriculture, and practically every form of individual and corporate activity which they have—when we realize the immense amount of money they have expended, and still have to expend, we can appreciate what they are doing to sell the New Deal to the American people or impose it upon them. The opportunity in this election with this hand-picked. That, however, is all the more reason why every citizen who sincerely believes that the New Deal is a menace to the liberty and prosperity of our country, should fight themselves for this fight."

"Any government which gets into its hands the accumulated savings of its people can by their expenditure create the illusion of prosperity, and provide temporary jobs for the unemployed. But this is entirely artificial. It does not and cannot form a solid foundation on which to rebuild our economic structure."

Taking up the questions which President Roosevelt last week asked the average citizen to answer for himself, Mr. Fletcher said he believed the answers would be about as follows:

"I am perhaps better off than last year, but when I see the vast sums expended and authorized to be expended by the Government I think myself well off when I hear of what my children and my children's children."

"My debts in so far as they have been assumed by the Government, that is, by the whole people, are less burdensome to me and in so far as the Government has postponed them they are also less heavy for the moment."

"My bank account, if any, is more secure, but am not sure how much."

perity possible, are no longer worthwhile.

"We believe that those principles are worthwhile and that the injustices and the inequalities which have developed can be cured and corrected without twisting and deforming our American institutions. We do not want to see these alphabetical bureaucratic agencies become permanent fixtures in our National political life. If the next Congress is not more self-respecting and conscious of its duties than the last they may easily become permanent. The Republican party accepts the issue of the New Deal. It will seek to return to Congress enough members to oppose effectively these innovations. We believe we will be successful in this."

"Nor will pauperism ever set a national fashion."

Chinch Bugs Attack

Teams; Game Delayed

Peoria, Ill., July 2 (AP).—Game delayed—chinch bugs. Forsaking succulent corn stalks, thick swarms of the farm pests swarmed over two semi-pro baseball teams in Glen Oak Park yesterday and almost broke up the game.

The bugs seemed to like the change of diet and burrowed into the sweaty flannels of the players' uniforms, and for half an hour the teams cooperated to battle bugs.

Darrow Hopes Enemies Will Stay Hitler

Opening Nazism Inquiry, He Calls Chancellor "Very Dangerous."

New York, July 2 (AP).—Clarence Darrow, internationally noted lawyer, started off an inquiry into conditions in Germany today with the statement he hoped "they" would kill Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

"If there are any more murders tomorrow, I hope it will end in the killing of Hitler," Darrow declared, as he and fellow-members of the American Inquiry Commission visited Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in city hall.

"I think Hitler is a very dangerous man and should be destroyed," Darrow said. "He is a man who has no conscience, no pity, no mercy, no love, no respect for the rights of others."

With Darrow were former United States Attorney George Z. Medalle, Dudley Field Malone, former Collector of the Port of New York, and Stanley High and Raymond L. Wise.

At its opening session, the commission was organized under the auspices of the Lord Mayor's Committee to aid victims of the Nazis. Testimony quoted Dr. Ernest F. S. Hanfstaengl, Hitler aide who is now in this country, as having called Catholics "swine and traitors" was given by Mrs. Anneliese Williams-Ellis, British author and daughter of J. St. Lo Strachey, famous Liberal editor.

Hanfstaengl said, made the remark to her fellow-traveler, Lady Listowel, when the British peeress visited Hitler in his Berlin apartment. "I think Hitler is a very dangerous man and should be destroyed," Darrow said. "He is a man who has no conscience, no pity, no mercy, no love, no respect for the rights of others."

Dr. Kurt Rosenfeld, former minister of justice for Prussia and attorney for Ernst Torgler, one of the Reichstag fire defendants, said he was afraid the present rulers of Germany intended to use "still more terrorist methods unless the whole world, and particularly the American people, raises its voice in protest."

"People's Courts" Assailed. Some 6,000 prisoners, Dr. Rosenfeld said, now are held for trial before the newly established "people's courts," and another 165,000 in concentration camps or under "protective custody" might be held before them.

He described the "people's courts" as institutions where the five judges are picked Nazis, and where the defense has no rights. They were created, he said, because the ordinary courts were not considered severe enough.

"They can take anyone into protective custody if they don't like the shape of his nose," he said, "or before he ever does anything, and keep him indefinitely."

Liquor Importers Facing U.S. Action

July 1 Price Deadline to Be Enforced.

Director J. H. Choate, Jr., of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, announced yesterday proceedings would be brought against liquor importers who failed to file posted prices under their code by July 1, the Associated Press reported.

Choate said the FACA had been informed that a large number of the importers had not filed prices and terms required to be posted and that "the Federal Alcohol Control Administration proposes promptly to institute proceedings for the suspension or revocation of the importer's basic permit in the case of any importer certified as having failed to post such prices and terms."

Frisco Drops Plan To Force Port Open

San Francisco, July 2 (AP).—Plans to open the port of San Francisco by force at 3 p. m. today were abandoned 20 minutes before the zero hour, and a tense city, which expected violence and bloodshed before night, breathed easier. Since May the port has been paralyzed by the strike of longshoremen.

At noon the Industrial Association, composed of employees, served notice on Mayor Angelo Rossi that cargoes would be moved and asked "necessary police protection."

strife-torn nation by making the Reichswehr (regular army) directly responsible for the safety of his friend and protégé, Von Papen.

Von Papen to Be Cleared. Not long after this became known a spokesman for the propaganda ministry stated that it had been definitely established that the vice-chancellor had no connection with the attempted rebellion which led to the executions.

It was indicated that he would be cleared at tomorrow's cabinet session, but would resign because some men in his office had been involved. "He is sitting in his home," this spokesman said of Von Papen.

In a bank it may happen that some lower official absconds," he continued, speaking of Von Papen's position. "The chief director is not implicated, but he is considered as having lacked in vigilance. Such a man often resigns."

President von Hindenburg's strong protective hand was thrown around Von Papen after the 88-year-old executive had congratulated Hitler and Goering on their "liquidation" with bullets of conservative and radical rebels against Hitlerism.

Only 19 executions have been accounted for in official statements, despite reports that literally hundreds were executed and many "took the consequences" (committed suicide) or were "killed resisting arrest."

Arrests Estimated at 200.

Many persons were unaccounted for, and most of these were tentatively recorded as under arrest. The number in custody was estimated as high as 200, but might easily be more.

Von Papen, a lonely figure, stripped of friends and aids by arrests and executions, remained a virtual prisoner, under orders not to leave his residence.

But when Von Hindenburg spoke Hitler took steps to protect Von Papen, whose criticism of radical Nazis two weeks ago was the first public sign of the rumblings preceding the "bloody Saturday" of suppression.

It was known that many high in social and political life were in custody, but their whereabouts was not revealed.

Maj. Muelndner von Muelheim, for many years adjutant to the former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, was arrested because of his friendship for Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, killed with his wife while "resisting arrest" Saturday.

It was emphasized that the major arrest was "personal," and that the former royal family is "unmolested."

The former crown prince said he had been in no way molested, and each Hohenzollern in Germany was safely accounted for.

These included Prince August Wilhelm, the former Kaiser's fourth son, himself a Storm Troop leader and thus subject to being torn from a pedestal and stood against a wall if found to have joined with the "rebels."

State of Siege Threatened. President von Hindenburg's order making the Reichswehr directly responsible for the safety of Von Papen, threatened a stage of siege which in Germany at present would mean in effect a military dictatorship, since the Reichswehr is said to be 100 per cent loyal to the president.

News of this stand by the president came after he had sent a message to Chancellor Hitler congratulating him on his coup against the rebels within the Nazi party and within the government.

From reports submitted to me, he telegraphed from his country estate at Neudeck, "I see that by your resolute operation and courageous personal action all high treasonable machinations have been nipped in the bud."

"You have saved the German people from serious dangers," he wrote to you my deep thanks and gratitude, with cordial regards, signed, Von Hindenburg, Reich President."

PWA Project Is Opposed as Subsidy to Textile Manufacturer.

Presidents of two universities and a college in the Carolinas yesterday came to the defense of the Duke Power Co. at a hearing protesting against the PWA grant of $2,787,000 to Greenwood County, S. C., for the development of a hydro-electric plant on the Saluda River.

In the delegation was Dr. W. P. Few, head of Duke University, the largest beneficiary of the Duke family's philanthropy and holder of the largest share of the endowment of more than $40,000,000. Duke University, which was host recently to Mrs. Roosevelt, has built and is maintaining one of the finest university plants in the South with Duke funds.

Dr. C. B. Geer, president of Furman University, Greenville, S. C., and Dr. W. L. Lingle, president of Davidson College, of North Carolina, and representatives of hospitals and charitable institutions which receive annuities under the Duke endowment also participated in the hearing before the Electric Power Board of Review.

The Duke representatives filed a three-point protest against the PWA allocation, asserting: That the project would cost more than estimated and would not be self-liquidating; that it would be a Governmental "subsidy" to James Self, Greenwood textile manufacturer, and that the Duke endowed institutions would suffer.

Self, it was said, would use more than 80 per cent of the power produced for three cotton textile mills and would purchase it at a price "lower than the cost of production." The allocation was approved last week, but was held up pending the hearing and a recommendation by the board of review, which is expected within ten days or two weeks.

W. R. Perkins, vice president of the Duke Power Co., yesterday insisted that the protest was not an attack on President Roosevelt's power policies nor on public development of water power resources.

The prospects were told that the stocks were due for a rise within a short time, the officials continued, and if they bought any of the stock, within a short while they would be called again or be interviewed by agents of the brokerage firm and be told that the securities had not advanced as expected. They were then advised to sell the stock they had previously bought and to invest their money in the Inspiration Gold Mining Co., the commission said.

How many persons were thus induced to "exchange" their holdings, according to the Federal Trade Commission, after being given what the commission called "false" statements about the gold mining property.

Carleton Saunders & Co., according to an investigation by the deputy attorney general of New Jersey, obtained about $200,000 from the sale of Inspiration stock through the "sell and switch" method.

The Federal Trade Commission instituted its proceedings under section 17-a of the 1933 securities act. The commission's bill of complaint, filed June 22, alleged that the defendant circulated from 3,000 to 8,000 persons, security holders listed on the New York Stock Exchange and New York Curb Exchange.

Virginia Leads In Farm Credit Group Effort

Dr. Ellis Tells Vocational Teachers Benefits of Loan Program.

Blacksburg, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—More farmers in Virginia have become members of their production credit association than in any of the other States in the second Farm Credit Association district, which, in addition to Virginia, comprises Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia, Dr. Lippert S. Ellis, of the Farm Credit Administration, said in a talk here today before the sixteenth annual meeting of teachers of vocational agriculture.

About 1,900 farmers in Virginia already have borrowed $1,120,000 from their local financial units, which are cooperatively managed by the borrowers. In addition, $200,000 has been allocated to the accounts of individual farmer-borrowers, who have arranged to receive their loans as they need the money during the season.

"The wise use of credit is an important factor in the success of many farms," Dr. Ellis said. "The production credit associations are not only making loans adapted to farmers' needs, but are aiding the farmer-borrower to make wise use of his credit by having him submit a financial statement and plans for the using of the loan and its repayment," he explained.

Used for Many Purposes. "Farmers are borrowing from production credit associations to finance the production, harvesting and marketing of their tobacco, potato, fruit, cotton and other crops and for the purchase of work stock, dairy cows, seed, feed, fertilizer, spray materials, machinery and farm supplies. The loans are planned to be self-liquidating and are therefore dated to mature when the farmer intends to market his products.

"Loans and advances now being made by the associations bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. Interest is payable when the loan matures and is charged only for the time the borrower has each advance, rather than on a flat basis.

"By obtaining their loans in installments during the season as they need the money, many farmers are reducing their operating costs, as interest is charged separately on each advance.

Make Cash Purchases. "In addition to these savings, many borrowers are benefiting by making use of their new credit system to obtain loans so they may pay cash for their purchases. Recent studies by agricultural colleges show that credit in the form of open accounts with storekeepers, merchants and seed and fertilizer dealers frequently costs from 13 to 20 per cent interest each year in the form of higher prices charged. This is because merchants and dealers are primarily engaged in selling their products rather than in providing credit facilities.

"These associations are organized as cooperative credit institutions to make loans to farmers on a purely business basis. The associations do not lend Government money, but, in the case of associations in Virginia, obtain their loan funds by discounting the borrowers' notes with the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank at Baltimore. This bank, together with the other regional Federal Intermediate Credit banks, sells its debentures to the investment public.

"Thus, the continued usefulness of the entire production credit system is dependent on maintaining the confidence of the investment public."

New Deal Is Praised And Scored in Virginia

Public Affairs Institute Speakers Show Wide Difference of Opinion; Brain Trust Called Extravagant; Monetary Juggling Scored.

By Franklin W. Altman, Jr., Charlottesville, Va., July 2 (Sp.). With the Roosevelt New Deal being subjected to the acid test of an intellectual clinical laboratory, the eighth session of the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs opened here today and will continue for two weeks.

Foremost in virtually every discussion on the day's program was assaults and defense of emergency activities transpiring in Washington. Speakers applauded the Roosevelt "good neighbor policy" for Latin America, praised the restrictions placed on "predatory finance" and hailed President Roosevelt, the "Brain Trust" and the "New Deal" as the "only practical hope of saving a semblance of either democracy or capitalism from the wreckage inherited from the Coolidge-Mellon era."

But at the same time the Roosevelt policies of monetary expansion, monetary juggling, extravagance of the "New Deal," the operation of the securities act, our "meddling" in Cuba in recent weeks and the general trend toward lodging wide powers in the President were targets for criticism—some of it sharp.

Form Started in 1927. All of this was in line with the purposes of the institute of public affairs, which was established in 1927 at the university founded by Thomas Jefferson, to encourage a frank and objective discussion of issues of the day. The spirit of Jefferson's tolerance still pervades the beautiful colonnaded buildings and the unique one-story dormitories, called "ranges," in this university. Welcoming the attendants at the institute tonight was R. Gray Williams, of Winchester, Va., speaking for Dr. John Newcomb, president of the university, who has gone to Europe.

"A fresh and fearless" discussion of problems that glow with the heat of popular interest and feeling, to the end that convictions and opinions may be bravely and frankly spoken and that out of the clash of conflicting voices something of truth may come, Williams put it. Explaining he expressed only his own views, Mr. Williams pointed out that many were mystified by parts of the "New Deal" program and that until recently there has been a hesitancy to debate "frankly these revolutionary changes at Washington."

Favors Honest Criticism. There has been a feeling that nothing should be done to add to the burden the President is carrying, he continued. "Most of us have a confidence in the high intentions of the President and much admiration for the cheerful courage with which he has met successive crises.

"But confidence and admiration for the President does not justify blind support of everything that he advocates. The times are too serious to permit party loyalty to close the mouth of honest criticism."

Mr. Williams held that the "New Deal does not breed back to Thomas Jefferson, for Mr. Jefferson insisted that the less government we had the better off we were. While Mr. Roosevelt feels that the more government we have the less likely we are to steal the bank's money, or sell to our neighbors phony securities, or make our employees work too many hours for too little pay." If Jefferson, whom he termed "a modern man," were to return to the Nation, he might agree with the Roosevelt philosophy, Mr. Williams conceded, adding he certainly would not be disturbed by the Brain Trust, since he believed an aristocracy of talent should participate in government. But, added the speaker, "where Jefferson would have disagreed with Mr. Roosevelt was in the amount of money his young men would be allotted for their social experiments."

Opposed to Permanence. Mr. Williams held that many who accept the doctrine that in time of war and acute crisis the President should become a temporary dictator, disagree "with the extravagances of the New Deal," and that "others will consent that a large measure of individual freedom be sacrificed to organization for the common good for the period of the emergency, but the insist that the individual shall be relieved of governmental interference when the emergency is over."

Earlier in the day, at the round table conference on "Dictatorship and Democracy"—which, incidentally, attracted by far the best attendance—Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, outspoken publicist and historian, contended that capitalism, which had brought democracy into existence, was now destroying it, and was insisting on dictatorships to save itself.

He held that the democracy founded by Jefferson after its first 50 years became unwieldy, contending it was designed for a simple, unchanging rural society, which had to deal with few and elementary problems and was based on a Laissez-Faire theory of government, which contended the best government is that which governs least and on a conviction of the real intellectual equality of men. Dr. Barnes argued that the "crude galatian or nose-counting democracy has now run its course in the United States."

Hints of Doom Ignored. He said "the older democracy has been carried down to defeat, not only as a result of its own defeats as a system of government, in an urban, industrial and world civilization, but that it also was strongly propelled on the way to oblivion by the fact that it has been compelled to assume responsibility for controlling and nursing along the ruggedly individual type of capitalism, which collapsed in the autumn of 1929 after many years of ominous but unheeded warnings of impending doom."

As alternatives to fascism and communism, he urged a revised democracy in which, as President Roosevelt has done, the "brains" of the Nation are called to participate, and in which there would be a weighted suffrage, based on the results of intelligence tests given to the whole population. A requirement of scientific and professional training for all candidates for public office and extension of the Civil Service system to the legislative and judicial branches of the Government. Contending that Roosevelt was only hope of saving democracy, Dr. Barnes said that "if our financial and industrial leaders have an iota of sense, logic or realism, they would see in Mr. Roosevelt their fair-haired boy, and would rally to his program with more loyalty than the profiteers rallied about Woodrow Wilson in 1917-18."

Roosevelt Last Chance. The depression is more of a menace to democracy and capitalism than either Prussianism or the Kaiser," he continued. "Roosevelt is the last chance of capitalism and democracy in the United States. If the New Deal collapses, we have the stark realities of fascism and then communism staring us in the face. It is the New Deal, castor oil or the firing squad."

Roosevelt policies, however, came in for some criticism during the discussion following Dr. Barnes' talk, but the sharpest criticism occurred in the round table on "Money, a Challenge to World Statesmanship." Dr. Ray B. Westerfield, president of the Economists' National Committee on monetary policy at Yale University, flayed the monetary experiments. Urging return to an international gold standard, he maintained the London Economic Conference broke down "largely on account of an about-face change of policy by the American Administration." Holding the United States was "the really obstreperous country," the one that spoiled the London conference and set the world back in its progress.

Warren Plan Scored. "We have provoked in our allies a sense of distrust around the monetary conference table," he said, adding that "the Thomas amendment, the gold reserve act and the silver act all load the President with big monetary powers which, with his system of experimental, football-tactics and capriciousness, are bound to lead to a constitutional crisis of no inconsiderable basis for monetary stability."

He pointed out that efforts to raise prices by monetary experimentation had signally failed. He held the Warren scheme of raising prices last fall seemed conclusively to show that the price level bears little relation to the price of gold, at least as regards "seasonal or cyclical or other short term changes."

On the other hand, he held that devaluation of gold dollar has created a doubt in a psychological situation with respect to investment and industrial activity that makes for stagnation.

German Payments Delayed. In the same round table conference, Dr. W. W. Cumberland, well-known fiscal and investment expert, in describing Germany's financial history since the World War, declared that due to operation of the securities act, there was a six-month delay last year before American creditors received script payment and that again this year there has been a longer delay while German creditors in other nations have been paid.

"During this period the economic situation of Germany has rapidly deteriorated and the distinct possibility exists that foreign exchange resources of Germany will not be adequate to make payment on American coupons, if and when registration of scrip is ultimately completed."

Dr. added, "No one has yet been able to explain how registration of scrip has been of the slightest advantage to American creditors, or protected their interests in any way whatever."

Davila Praises "Good Neighbor." Dr. Carlos Davila, former president of Chile and that country's former ambassador to Washington, joined with Paul V. Shaw, of Columbia University, in praising the Roosevelt Latin-American "good neighbor" policy. Dr. Davila warned that if this country is to increase its trade in Latin America it must abandon its role of policeman in that area, he said tariff barriers had never been a real trouble in this trade.

In an address designed to brush away myths about Pan-American relations, he asserted that Latin-American bonds held here in default "were a better investment for Americans than most of your high-grade corporations."

Prof. Shaw, while eulogizing the Roosevelt "good-neighbor" policy and reciting its marked beneficial results, contended we must cease to "intervene morally as well as militarily in Cuba. He said "we have been intervening in the in-

U. S. to Borrow Nine Billions In Next Year

High Treasury Cash Total to Be Drawn Upon in Emergency.

The Government will probably have to borrow around $9,000,000,000 during the year ending next June to meet maturing debts and provide for the almost $10,000,000,000 spending program projected by President Roosevelt.

Maturing obligations will exceed $5,000,000,000 and the prospective excess of expenditures over receipts, counting RFC refunds in the latter, will be in the same neighborhood. Treasury officials said yesterday the abnormally high cash balance of $2,581,922,240 would likely be drawn on to take care of at least $1,000,000,000 of expenditures. Barring use of the Treasury's gold devaluation profit, this would leave roughly $9,000,000,000 in financing, with $4,000,000,000 representing new money lent by the public.

Predict Lower Interest. They expressed confidence not only that this could be achieved without difficulty, but that a reduction below the current 3.18 per cent average interest rate paid on Government obligations would result. All but $1,500,000,000 of the maturing debt must be refunded within the first six months, including $1,246,231,000 of Fourth Liberty Bonds which have been called for redemption October 15 out of a total of $4,300,000,000 outstanding.

This one of the places where the Government hopes to save money on interest charges by offering refunding bonds, with a substantially lower coupon. In addition, $535,981 of first Liberty four and one-quarter's are callable December 15, provided notice is given three months earlier. Given favorable market conditions, it is believed the Treasury will seriously consider taking these up and replacing them with lower-coupon securities.

Rates Hit New Low. Liberty 3½ per cent bonds totaling $1,329,226,350 similarly are callable, but as this coupon is closer to the current yield on Government bonds it does not offer the same inducement for retirement, particularly at a time when the Treasury is faced with heavy borrowing of new money.

Although the general policy of the Treasury is to avoid having too high a percentage of its debt in short-term obligations, the exceptionally favorable terms it has been able to obtain for brief periods have encouraged the sale of bills. As an example, a recent offering, due in

Drought Area Cattle to Move

Are to Be Transported to Greener Pastures in South by FERA.

Beef cattle in the drought areas of the Middle West and Northwest will be transported to greener pastures in nine Southern States by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

A total of $6,708 head of cattle were ordered shipped to the more plentifully-watered areas yesterday by Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. The cattle will be fattened under the brand of the State emergency relief administrations until ready for canning and distribution to destitute families next fall.

These are the first of what are expected to grow to a total of half a million cattle to be pastured in the South under the FERA brand. The program is distinct from the previously inaugurated movement to place dairy cattle in the hands of rural families who are being rehabilitated.

A specified rental will be paid for the pasturage in each State. The States to which the cattle have been ordered are Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia, Arkansas, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Alabama, North Carolina and Florida.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday announced that its first scholastic year had been a success. Adult general educational classes in 48 States were attended by 612,200 and gave employment to 18,430 unemployed teachers.

One of the accomplishments of the schools, according to the FERA announcement, was the "removal of inferiority complexes among the needy unemployed pupils." The

Virginia Jury Indicts 3 of Tri-State Gang

Mais, Legenza, Misana
Named as Killers in Richmond Holdup.

Three members of the so-called "Tri-State" gang were indicted for murder by a Virginia grand jury yesterday.

The Hastings grand jury, convening its July term, named Robert Mais, Walter Legenza, alias Davis, and Arthur Misana as killers of E. M. Huband, Federal service mail truck driver, in a Richmond holdup last March.

Mais and Legenza are being held in Baltimore pending Mais' recovery from gunshot wounds inflicted by police during a gun battle several weeks ago. The reputed bandits were surprised in a suburban hide-away and attempted to escape. Indictments against the two men, prepared by Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Charles T. Tinsley, also named George Kauffman and William B. (Big George) Phillips as members of the gang responsible for the holdup and ambush of Huband. The latter two have since been slain. Phillips was killed by Police Officer John Cato on Ontario place and Adams Mill road northwest last April, and Kauffman was victim of a gangland "ride" in Pittsburgh.

Mais, Legenza and Misana are also wanted here for last December's mail robbery and shooting at Union Station. Francis White, a postoffice guard, was shot and wounded seriously. Misana is still at large.

All three were named in a recent postoffice "lookout" circular as suspects in a series of crimes through several Eastern States. John Kendrick, reputed leader of the gang, is in the District Jail awaiting trial on several counts.

Bribery Plot Laid to Lawyer

Federal Grand Jury Indicts
Aaron Sapiro in Conspiracy Case.

New York, July 2 (AP).—Aaron Sapiro, attorney who once sued Henry Ford for $1,000,000 libel, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and attempted bribery of jurors.

The grand jury also indicted Sam Roth, who had been previously charged with jury tampering, in connection with the trial of Murray C. Harwood, Sidney Paris and others.

This indictment related to the same trial, in which Harwood and Paris were convicted of mail fraud. After being sentenced, Harwood assisted in New York Federal court that an unnamed attorney had promised to appeal the case, accepted $10,000 and then did not take action.

Sapiro recently was acquitted in Chicago of having conspired with others in Cook County to commit malicious mischief by causing the explosion of bombs, destroying buildings and inflicting injuries on various persons in the laundry business.

Attack Suspect Escapes Sheriff

Flees After Christiansburg
Man Subdues Him.

Christiansburg, Va., July 2 (AP).—A man identified by Sheriff O. W. Allier as Harry (Buck) King, broke away from the officer and escaped here last night after he had been arrested on a charge of attacking R. L. Caldwell, manager of an overall company.

Caldwell told the sheriff that as he left his automobile at the plant about 11 p. m., a man struck him on the head with a hammer. Momentarily unconscious, he recovered enough to grapple with the man and call for help.

Caldwell held his assailant until the sheriff arrived. The prisoner feigned weakness and, as the sheriff stopped to pick up the hammer, he ran. Caldwell said he believed the attack was a kidnap attempt.

Two-Lane Highway Contracts Awarded

2 More Sections, Covering
7½ Miles, Affected.

Baltimore, July 2 (Spl.).—Award of contracts for two more sections of the new two-lane road between Baltimore and the North was announced today by the State roads commission.

The sections listed are between the village of Golden Ring, 2 miles beyond the Baltimore City line, and the Little Gunpowder River in Harford County. They cover about 7½ miles. On June 18 a contract was let for construction of about 4 miles of the highway between the Little Gunpowder and the Ha Branch and work on this section was begun June 25.

Under contracts to be let soon, the two-way road will extend from Baltimore to Aberdeen, about 25 miles. It will replace the old Philadelphia road, a narrow, winding highway, which has been the scene of scores of accidents in recent years. Ultimately, it is planned to continue the two-lane road to the Delaware State line, where it will connect with a similar road now under construction in Delaware.

Arthurdale.

Reedsville, W. Va., July 2 (Spl.). Plans are complete for a celebration of Independence Day at the Arthurdale Federal Subsistence Homestead project, which is expected to be attended by many visitors as well as all those connected with the experimental farming enterprise.

The day's events will comprise the first program offered by residents of the project since completion and occupancy of the first 50 homes and their community center, formerly an old church on the Fairfax estate.

Andy Goldstrom, president of the homesteaders, and five other homesteaders—Andrew Wolf, Arnold Malone, Percy Martin, Ambrose Botherton and Elmer Costello—are in charge of the program. It will include mass games, a horseshoe pitching contest, baseball and other entertainments. It will be the first real play the homesteaders have had since they began work on their homes, the farms and the roads.

Roads in Virginia Damaged by Heat Of Recent Weeks

Richmond, July 2 (Spl.).—Just while the State highway department is carrying on an extensive program of repairing damage to oiled roads caused by the severe weather last winter, it was learned today that the excessive high temperature of the last two weeks caused many of these roads to buckle, with resultant heavy damage.

Fourteen new surface-treating projects will be in progress this week, the State highway department announced today. They include:

Route 4 from Montpelier to Route 54; Route 5 from Shirley to a point 2 miles west; Route 17, from Route 15 to the Stafford County line and from Laneview to Gloucester Courthouse; Route 29, from Ruckersville to a point 3 miles north; Route 29, from Charlottesville to Covesville.

Kent on Hunger Strike; Fights Murder Charge

Admits Trip to D. C. With Mrs. Hastings; Says They Parted Here.

Roanoke, Va., July 2 (AP).—Weakened by his refusal to eat, Maj. Robert C. Kent, Jr., vigorously protested his innocence tonight of charges that he slew Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, a resort hotel owner of Blue Ridge Springs.

Kent, 42, a grandson of a former Lieutenant Governor of Virginia and member of a prominent family in the western part of the State, was near hysteria. He kept shouting "I can't stand it" as he clung to the bars of his jail cell.

"They haven't got anything on me," he added. "Why would they want a confession if they had anything?"

Visited by A. E. F. Veterans. Federal and State authorities arrested Kent three days ago after Mrs. Hastings failed to return to her hotel.

Men Kent commanded in France during the World War called on him in his cell today, but instead of muddy, wire-torn khaki they wore blue uniforms. The visitors were Motorcycle Policemen John F. Rice and Fred Tickle and Patrolman Harry Kirkner, all of the Roanoke force.

Kent is charged with kidnapping and murder under the Federal "Lindbergh" statute and State laws. The State is prepared to contend he fired Mrs. Hastings from the hotel, drove her to Washington or some other point, shot her, and abandoned her body in a roadside ditch.

Body Found in Ditch. He said he accompanied her to Washington and parted from her there. She told him, Kent asserts, that she was not planning to return to Virginia for some time.

The woman's body, two bullet holes in the head, was found last Wednesday in a ditch near Stroudsburg, Pa., by Mrs. George Oliver, who operates the Oliver House at Stroudsburg. She reported the discovery to Pennsylvania police and the body lay unclaimed for several days. Yesterday relatives of the missing woman and Betout County officers went to Stroudsburg to view it. Positive identification was made and the body will be returned to Virginia for burial.

Betout County authorities said that with both State and Federal charges against Kent, who is married, there may be a question of jurisdiction involved. It was too early, they added, to say that phase of the case extensively.

College Head Begins Duties

Dr. Henry I. Stahr Takes Over Hood School.

Frederick, Md., July 2 (Sp.).—The Rev. Dr. Henry I. Stahr, Merion, Pa., today assumed his duties as president of Hood College here, succeeding Dr. Joseph Henry Apple, who has become president emeritus. Dr. Stahr has been a member of the board of directors since 1927.

The Rev. Dr. Stahr is executive secretary of the board of Christian education of the Reformed Church with offices in Philadelphia. He will not relinquish that office until later in the year. He has served on important church commissions, committees and other groups; has been a member of the Sunday school advisory board of the Eastern Synod and chairman of the board, a member of the former and present board of Christian education, chairman of the Collegeville summer missionary conference for five years and the reformed summer missionary conference in Frederick in 1928.

He was ordained to the ministry December 4, 1910. Until he became executive secretary of the board of Christian education in 1920, the Rev. Dr. Stahr was pastor of churches at Reading, Bethlehem and Hanover, Pa.

Husband Locates Wife, Man; Both Held for Bigamy

Danville, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—Henry James Beach and Mrs. Mamie Sexton Cook Beach were today following a play of fate which threw them across the path of an aggrieved self-styled first husband, Gene R. Cook, of Martinsville.

Cook told the police that his wife left him three years ago at Spartanburg, S. C., taking their adopted daughter. Since then, he said, he had devoted himself to trailing his wife from Texas to Florida, but he always missed her. Returning to his old home at Martinsville, he came here today with his brother-in-law.

As he went to re-enter his car, he saw Beach standing by the car. Cook held him until the police arrested him and the former wife. It was revealed that Mrs. Cook and Beach had opened a small filling station near Danville, not knowing Cook was living in this vicinity. They will be tried at Martinsville.

Roanoke, Va., July 2 (AP).—Armed citizens of Franklin County ended an all-day search tonight for four black-hat bandits who blasted a safe in a Redwood store, Redwood, early today.

Working with the technique of old-fashioned crackmen, the quartet hammered off the safe knob, squirreled nitroglycerine into the opening from a spring and then blasted the door from its hinges.

Shot Victim Keeps Details From Police

Wounded Man Refuses to Reveal Assailant.

Norfolk, Va., July 2 (AP).—Suffering with a bullet wound near his heart, a man tentatively identified as E. J. Murray, has refused to explain the shooting to police. Lying in a hospital here he says he was shot by a "friend over a personal matter."

The wounded man was pulled from the water as the Old Dominion steamer George Washington docked here yesterday. Passengers heard a shot and a splash and gave the "man overboard" alarm.

The wounded man had booked passage as Andrew J. Carroll, but New York and Boston hotel bills made out to E. J. Murray were found in his possession. He was shot from close range.

FERA Raises Eastern Shore Potato Price

Equivalent of $2 a Barrel Fixed After Appeals to Washington.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday raised the purchase price on 1,380 carloads of potatoes it has ordered from the Norfolk and Eastern Shore areas, buying of which began yesterday.

The new price is $1.75 net to the growers, f. o. b. shipping point, with the Government paying the cost of inspection. The grower will have to stand no commission charge, and the price would be equivalent to approximately $2 a barrel under normal circumstances.

The market price was being held at $2 yesterday pending negotiations here to increase the price beyond the $1.50 figure fixed Saturday by FERA.

A delegation from the Eastern Shore came to Washington yesterday and urged an increase in the price, it being represented that nothing less than $2 gross would permit the grower to come anywhere near breaking even.

It was possible that FERA may increase the price later. The Norfolk area will furnish 235 carloads of the total FERA will buy in Virginia. The Eastern Shore will supply 1,155 barrels, this division being based on the yield available.

Bank Litigants At Frederick Get Full 22%

Court Upholds Dissenters' Allowance; Orders 6% Dividend.

Frederick, Md., July 2 (Sp.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard filed an order in circuit court today authorizing John J. Ghinger, State bank commissioner and receiver for the closed Central Trust Co., to pay depositors dissenting to the new plan of reorganization 22 per cent of their claims.

The court also accepted the report of H. E. Meeks, chief bank examiner, who, reporting on the assets and liabilities of the defunct bank, placed the claims of dissenting depositors at 22 per cent. The judge further ordered the receiver to set aside this sum for payment, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before July 21.

In a second order, the court instructed the receiver to include in his audit, to be filed presently, a dividend of 6 per cent to be paid to all creditors of the closed bank. This is in accord with the plan for reorganization, which called for payment of such a dividend upon setting up the new bank.

The depositors who dissented to the reorganization plan will be paid 6 per cent outright, along with all other creditors. The remaining 16 per cent due to the dissenting depositors will be retained by the receiver, subject to the court's further order, which may be passed at the expiration of the designated three weeks.

$25,000 Paid to Counsel. The backers of the plan of reorganization had contended that Meeks' allowance was too high, and suggested a ratio of 12 1/2 per cent. Dissenting depositors claimed that the figure was too low.

With the two orders, the court's order setting at $15,500 the remaining compensation to be received by former Judge John H. Newman, who has been counsel to the receiver since the bank closed September 3, 1931. An additional $1,000 is allowance for counsel engaged by Judge Newman.

The allowance of $15,500, with a previous payment of $10,000 for services, made in December, 1932, brings to $25,500 the total sum paid to the receiver's counsel. The court expressed regret that the sum would not be considered by Judge Newman as adequate, but stated that the sum represented, to the court's best judgment, the proper amount to be paid.

The court stated that Judge Newman "has performed the exacting duties of that position with exceptional ability and efficiency."

Court Praises Newman.

Referring to a statement in Ghinger's petition that the general creditors of the trust company had been saved several hundred thousand dollars through litigation before the court, the judge said:

"It was a question which probably would have been raised in the appellate court in relation to one of the other trust company liquidations in progress in the State. But the probability does not detract from the importance of Judge Newman's achievement in the priority litigation. The ordinary depositors were greatly benefited. But the trust claimants, who have been thereby reduced to common creditors, are now interested ratably with the general depositors in the funds against which counsel fees are chargeable."

A subsequent report by Mr. Meeks accompanied the court's dividend order, and placed at $761,515.28 the balance available for distribution to general creditors and for payment of costs. A tentative calculation placed the total represented by creditors, who have petitioned to have the value of their claims determined, at $453,000.

Of its acceptance of Mr. Meeks' estimate of 22 per cent, the court stated:

"A careful study of the unliquidated assets of the Central Trust Co. has led up to the conclusion that some of the valuations listed in the report prepared by Mr. Meeks, the aggregate of those estimates sufficiently approximates the present value of the assets to justify its provisional 'option, in the main, for the purpose of the accompanying order."

Anti-Mosquito Battle Waged By Delaware on 107,500 Acres

By Marion Butler.

Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 2.—Fighting one of man's oldest enemies with science's newest tools is the task of 400 CCC workers now laboring on the Delaware salt marshes surrounding this famous resort.

The first CCC group in the country to be placed on a mosquito control project instead of reforestation, the work is attracting wide attention. State and Federal officials and large numbers of resorters are among those making frequent inspection trips by boat through the marsh areas.

Delaware has 107,500 acres of salt tidal marsh due to be freed of mosquito breeding regions in the next three and one-half years. Of these acres, 18,000 surround Rehoboth Beach, long a playground for official Washington. At work only since last December, the CCC here already has rendered 10,000 of these acres unfit for mosquito habitation.

Huge Drainage System. The work has been accomplished by a gigantic drainage system of ditches, 10 inches wide by 20 deep, and spaced 150 to 300 feet apart. To date 38 miles of these channels have been dug through the marsh area, while 250 miles of old ditches and natural drainage outlets have been cleared.

Since the natural breeding place of the mosquito is the undrained swamp marsh area, these channels opening the region to regular drainage by incoming and outgoing tides bars the larva at least once daily to the destroying rays of the sun. In addition, the ditches admit the entrance of small fish, during full tide, which eat the mosquito larva floating in the water. The tiny killifish is an especially efficient enemy of salt marsh mosquito larva.

Both airplanes and specially designed "mosquito" tractors have been employed by the scientists and directors in charge of this project. Aerial photography made possible the initial plans, enabling the charting of almost impassable swamp regions.

Automatic trap-catches determined the types of mosquitoes and their breeding places. Broad-tread tractors, especially designed for marsh work, carried out the channeling. Though weighing one or two tons, these tractors can traverse marsh areas too soft to support a man's weight.

Publisher Maps Program of Improvements for School.

Norfolk, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—Election of John Stewart Bryan, Richmond publisher, to the presidency of the College of William and Mary, is expected to start a series of developments in connection with the future of the institution, the second oldest college in America. Among those are:

Advancement of plans for a $500,000 to $1,000,000 endowment and eventual separation of the college from the State educational system, together with declaration of a policy to make it a college of liberal arts, with emphasis on higher learning and sociological subjects.

Expansion of the Norfolk division of the college through approval by the PWA of a loan of $260,000 for a combined administration building and gymnasium and athletic stadium.

Reorganization of the administrative phases of the college, with Dr. W. T. Hodges, director of the Norfolk division, to be considered for dean of the college, while Mr. Bryan devotes his attention to financial rehabilitation and future plans.

Probable return to the college of former Gov. John Garland Pollard as dean of the Marshall Wythe School of Government, a position he held before he became chief executive of the State.

Court to Rule On Swine Law

Former Mayor Shryock, of Winchester, Says He Is Exempt.

Winchester, Va., July 2 (A.P.).—F. Amos Shryock, former Mayor of Winchester, today answered a charge of keeping hogs for commercial purposes in this city with the defense that when the ordinance was passed by the common council prohibiting such production, he was mayor and that he was assured by the councilmen that the law would have no bearing on abattoirs such as he operates.

Shryock was haled before Justice Donald L. Weems on a charge that he was keeping hogs for commercial purposes and not in accordance with the statute which limits swine in Winchester to four for domestic purposes. He pleaded not guilty.

Ready to testify for Shryock were councilmen Fred W. Forney, John H. Rosenberger and Percy D. Miller, members of the council when the ordinance was passed. They were not called to the stand.

Justice Weems took the case under advisement.

Today's hearing was the outgrowth of an effort last week by the city of Winchester to fence off a portion of Shryock's land because, it was claimed, his hogs came too near the spring from which a portion of the local water supply is obtained. Shryock obtained an injunction restraining the city from erecting the fence. The charge of keeping hogs for commercial purposes was subsequently filed against Shryock by Chief of Police C. W. Hollis.

Man Faces Three Wives, Then Gets 5 Years for Bigamy

Danville, Va., July 2 (Sp.).—Edgar Orrell Thomas, recently arrested here as a bigamist, pleaded guilty today in the corporation court and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Thomas first was ushered into the presence of his three wives, his children and mothers-in-law, in the police chief's office. The three wives exchanged views, laughing over their plight. Mrs. Dolly Burgess Thomas, of Spray, N. C., was the first to identify her husband. They have three small children. Then Mrs. Nina Nicely Thomas, of Clifton Forge, pointed him out as the man who married her in February, 1930, and finally Mrs. Naomi Cobbler Thomas, 17, whom he wed three weeks ago, identified him.

Thomas finally admitted that all of the women were his wives.

Ritchie's Foes Fail in Plan to Form Coalition

Jackson, Radcliffe Peace Parley Results in Deadlock.

Baltimore, July 2 (Sp.).—Collapse of the plans of Maryland anti-Ritchie Democrats to form a coalition organization for defeating the Governor's fifth term aspirations has left the two principal opposition gubernatorial candidates, Mayor Howard W. Jackson and George L. Radcliffe, further apart than ever—so far apart, in fact, that a proposed conference later in the week has been canceled.

When Jackson met his backers met Mr. Radcliffe and his chief lieutenants at a "peace parley" yesterday. It was the aim of the conference to have one of the two candidates quit the gubernatorial race and throw his support back to the remaining candidate.

Although the meeting was secret, reports have come out that each of the two candidates and their supporters spent most of the afternoon claiming votes in the State nominating convention and trying to persuade the other candidate to abandon the fight. The result was that neither would get out of the race.

Dr. Charles H. Conley, the third anti-Ritchie candidate, did not attend.

With the failure of the peace parley, Mr. Radcliffe and his lieutenants were reported ready to go ahead with lining up a complete ticket. One of those most prominently mentioned as a senatorial candidate on the Radcliffe ticket is J. Vincent Jamison, a prominent Hagerstown manufacturer. Gov. Ritchie and his backers also are reported at work on a complete ticket for the Governor's campaign.

One of those mentioned for the senatorial nomination is Congressman David J. Lewis, of Cumberland.

President Puts Politics to Side, Says Woodrum

Democrats at McLean Are Told Security for All Is His Aim.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Woodrum, of Roanoke, Va., said last night at a meeting of northern Virginia Democratic executive committees that "the New Deal is Franklin D. Roosevelt's declaration of economic independence."

One hundred and fifty-eight years ago," he said, "statesmen fathers were waging a determined battle against what seemed to be unsurmountable obstacles for the purpose of securing for themselves and posterity political independence. Thomas Jefferson's immortal declaration was their guiding star."

"Today the American people are engaged in another battle—no less far reaching in its potentialities. They battle today to perpetuate that political independence and to gain economic independence and to establish social justice between men."

Woodrum addressed the executive committees of Alexandria and the counties of Fairfax, Loudoun, Prince William, Fairfax and Arlington at a dinner in the Washington Golf and Country Club.

"In solving the problems that confront him, the President has inaugurated a new era in government manipulation and, unlike former administrations, he has refused to chart his course only along the lines of partisan benefit and adventure," he said.

"He has been willing to counsel with and advise with those in political authority, but he has likewise insisted that this practical and political advice should be tempered and seasoned with the best intellectual and scientific collaboration possible. In adopting this course of procedure, I think the President has acted wisely and I believe the American people will approve his course of conduct in this respect."

The present occupant of the White House will not be dominated or coerced by any politician, nor will he blindly follow any so-called intellectual group. He will inform himself fully upon all subjects and act according to his best light for the interest of all the people.

Myers Declares Few Farmers Need Debt Law

Frazier-Lemke Bill Backs Up Rural Credit Program.

Governor W. F. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, said yesterday only "a slight minority of farmers" will have to take advantage of the Frazier-Lemke farm debt moratorium act to save their homes, because refinancing of farm mortgage indebtedness by his organization already has been general in scope.

Despite protests from insurance companies and other holders of farm mortgage papers, President Roosevelt signed the bill Saturday. The new law gives debt-burdened farmers the option to scale down their obligations by applying to Federal courts or by taking a breathing spell for five years if they are unable to reach an agreement with creditors.

Coming on the day that the measure was practically placed in operation, Governor Myers' statement was regarded here as an attempt to reassure those who fear the act would materially cut the value of farm mortgages.

Purpose of Act. He declared that "the Frazier-Lemke amendment to the bankruptcy act is in accord with the program of the Farm Credit Administration, as it attempts to prevent occasional selfish creditors from foreclosing on distressed farm debtors."

Gov. Myers pointed out that 90 per cent of every dollar loaned by land banks has gone to prevent farmers from going bankrupt.

"We said the total farm mortgage loans and commitments made under the refinancing program will raise the total outstanding loans of the land banks to more than $2,500,000,000, or more than 30 per cent of the total farm mortgage indebtedness in the Nation, now placed at $8,000,000,000."

Continuing, Gov. Myers said: "Farmers as a class are very slow to take bankruptcy. My experience in working with them personally and in the Farm Credit Administration gives me every confidence that they still retain an over-present urge to pay their debts."

"More than 86 per cent of the installations on land bank commission loans, which matured prior to June 1, were paid on or before they were due. Of those which are delinquent, two-thirds are for less than 30 days. This shows that even the most heavily indebted farmers are acting in the highest of good faith."

Farmers Relieved. "In lending almost a billion dollars on the security of farm mortgages, 90 per cent of which was used to refinance existing farm debt burdens and in making commitments to lend $700,000,000 more, the Farm Credit Administration has become the creditor of the vast number of farmers who otherwise might have needed to avail themselves of bankruptcy as provided by the Frazier-Lemke bill in order to avoid foreclosure."

After declaring that loans would continue to be made up to 75 per cent of the normal value of farms, Gov. Myers asserted that in the last year more than 40,000 farmers have appealed to his organization for financial aid because the mortgage holders were pushing them.

"The creditors of the farmers," he added, "were requested not to press foreclosure proceedings until the Land Bank could determine if they could be refinanced. Appeals for such emergency assistance have fallen from a peak of 2,000 a week in November to about 500 recently. "Of the 40,000 emergency cases, more than two-thirds of the farmers applied for loans and about 70 per cent obtained loans or commitments, thus removing thousands of farmers from the 10 per cent class, which otherwise might have needed to resort to bankruptcy."

Few Farms Taken.

He said the number of farms acquired by the land banks during the year has been the smallest in a number of years. He explained that the policy of his administration was not to foreclose on any borrower "who is doing his honest best to meet his obligations, who is making proper application of his income, if any, after meeting necessary living expenses, and who is adequately caring for the mortgage property."

"Further pursuit of this policy," the governor added, "pending further recovery and further rise in farm values, will obviate any extensive need for resort to the bankruptcy provisions of the Frazier-Lemke act."

"One farmer in several hundred of insolvent farmers who can not come to an agreement with his creditors or arrive at a solution through one of the 2,300 debt conciliation committees by voluntary action, can obtain court action under the bill."

He pointed out that under the refinancing program of the Farm Credit Administration, scaling down of the claims of creditors had been necessary in less than one out of seven loans.

$20,000 Denied to Heirs of Norfolk Seaman.

Norfolk, Va., July 2 (Spl.).—Declaring the evidence conclusive that Capt. Owen W. MacDonald, retired shipmaster found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of the Ballentine Hotel the night of December 14, died by suicide, Federal Judge Luther B. Way directed a verdict in favor of the defendant today in the $20,000 insurance suit of John T. Williams against the New York Life Insurance Co.

Judge Way, directed, however, that the company pay back to Williams a total of $517 representing premium payments with interest since the two policies were taken out in October, 1932.

Williams, beneficiary under the two policies, was suing for their face value, claiming that Capt. MacDonald died by accident, while intoxicated.

The feminine diamond bears no relation to the masculine diamond-purchasing ability. We want to know is how Mr. or any other husband, ever the demand "pent up."

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Barger

Mr. Garner, the Balance Wheel.

EVERY now and then some newspaper or press association shows some amazing enterprise as to make amazing papers and press associations turn green with envy followed by an immediate perking up on their own part. It is what might be called setting the pace.

Only yesterday the Associated Press made the discovery that Mr. Roosevelt is coming more and more to depend on Speaker Garner, that as has come to have so much dependence on him, in fact, that he, the President, has asked Mr. Garner to give up his fishing and return to the Nation's Capital in September.

The President came to count upon Mr. Garner, in the last session, the disclosure went on, as a balance against his professional advisers. He even came to the point of letting Mr. Garner take bills up to the Hill and give them to the proper Senator for introduction.

This latter is an estate which few men achieve. It utterly belies the popular conception of the Vice President having nothing to do.

It is the statement that Mr. Garner was the balance against the professional advisers, however, that constitutes the real meat of this scoop. I am not denying the statement at all. But I think I am safe in saying that to Liberals and Tories alike it will come as a distinct surprise, if not a shock.

It is not that I don't think the Speaker would qualify as a balance. He will be news to most of us, however, is that there was such a thing as a balance. He must have gone through his balancing act with the greatest of ease like the man on the flying trapeze because the plain truth is that we knew nothing about it.

I have never had anything to intrigue me so much, though. What, do you suppose, it could have been that he balanced on what piece of legislation enacted at the last session was it that the professional advisers urged to an extreme and the Speaker intervened as the balance? What was it the Liberals sought, pressed upon the President and had him almost agreeing when in came the Speaker and acting as a balance, dissuaded the President?

Let's see. Could it have been the stock exchange bill? Did the Speaker balance against that? The securities act? The dollar manipulation? The lodging of unheard of authority in the President's hands, the appropriation of billions for him to spend? Which one of those items, one wonders, did the Speaker act as a balance, a conservative, restraining influence?

The contemplation here is frightening. After realizing what was done to think that the result was tempered by the Speaker's balance role makes one's hair stand on end. What in the name of goodness would have happened had there been no balance?

You know, I'll bet it was in the Bankhead cotton regimentation bill that his conservative influence acted as a welcome check. I'll bet the sponsors wanted to cut down the number of cotton farmers as well as the number of cotton acres and the speaker said: "No, let's confine it to the acreage at this time." Maybe, Mr. Roosevelt's monetary advisers had him pretty much on their side to cut the dollar to 50 cents and the speaker with his great conservative influence persuaded him to cut it simply to 59 cents. There would be 9 cents worth of influence here, and before the Associated Press disclosure we had thought that was a fair appraisal of the speaker's part.

The more one analyzes what the recent Congress did the more he concludes that it must have been the Speaker-Lewis act in which Mr. Garner served as such a balance. This act makes it possible for the farmer to pay only 1 per cent interest on his mortgage for five years or else get a five-year moratorium. Maybe if Mr. Garner had not been a balance the act would have given the farmer the mortgages free.

The Associated Press story says: "In addition, it was reported, Mr. Roosevelt wants the country to know that he and Garner are going along hand in hand in the Administration's recovery efforts."

Ah, there's the trick. The source of the story becomes plain.

U. S. Radio Experts Discover New Way to Aid Blind Flying

Voice and Beacon Signals Sent Aboard at Same Time.

Radio engineers of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce, are experimenting with a new method of aeronautical radio beacon transmission which will permit these directional signals for aircraft to be on the air continuously without interruptions for voice communication, according to Eugene L. Vidal, director of air commerce.

Preparations are being made for flight tests at Pittsburgh to determine the feasibility of the project for use throughout the Federal Airways System.

"Concurrently with work of this nature," Mr. Vidal said, "we are making an exhaustive investigation of the possibility of employing the radio compass as an aid to air navigation. (The radio compass enables fliers to tune in on any type of radio transmitter, including commercial broadcasting stations, and by setting his course to coincide with the maximum strength of the signals or broadcasts, he may fly direct to the location of the station.) In any event, all new airways and whatever improvements of old airways may be made, will provide for either method of radio directional guidance."

Long Step Forward.

Rex Martin, assistant director of air commerce in charge of air navigation, declared that the new method of radio beacon transmission, if found practicable, will represent a long step forward in radio communication on the airways.

"It will do away with interruptions of radio beacon service, and at the same time provide unlimited range for weather broadcasts and other voice communication with aircraft," he said. "It is based upon simultaneous transmission of aural radio range beacon signals and voice on the same frequency, an operation which is not now possible at the same time."

Carrying this line of development still farther, our engineers, working under Mr. Jackson's supervision, devised the method for transmitting the aural radio beacon signals and voice simultaneously on the same frequency.

In the experimental installation now being prepared at Pittsburgh, the two radio transmitters, one for voice and the other for radio beacon signals, will be tuned to the same frequency, and will operate at the same time."

Federal Drive Galpin Leaves Post as Head Against Crime Gathers Speed Of Farm Unit

Kidnapers and Gangsters to Bear Brunt of War by Government.

A comparatively little publicized but nonetheless determined drive against gangsterism and crime by agencies of the Government is being pushed at top speed.

The drive can be traced directly to the anti-crime measures passed by Congress recently. The bills were sponsored by the Department of Justice. They nearly died in the House Judiciary Committee until the depositions of John Dillinger, the Nation's No. 1 public enemy.

The Justice Department serves as the spearhead of the war against outlawry. Valuable aid also will be given, however, by units of the Treasury and Postoffice Departments and the Internal Revenue Bureau. Generalissimo of the attacking forces is Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. The battle will cover all fronts.

Kidnaping Heads List.

Kidnaping, popular in recent years, is to be fought with the aid of the drastic "Lindbergh" law, which allows Federal agents to step into any kidnaping case after seven days' absence of the victim, under the assumption that the kidnaper of victim must have been transported across a State line. The death penalty is provided in cases where the victim is not returned unharmed.

Bootleggers, still active and powerful despite their recent defeat in the fight with the usual methods, plus new alcohol control regulations. These include such steps as limitation on sale of liquor bottles.

"The (anti-kidnaping) bill under discussion to extend the Federal jurisdiction under the commerce clause of the Constitution," Cummings said. "Some such cases have been required as much as four years of litigation under the Sherman act. I feel confident that under the new law they can be much more effectively and expensively prosecuted."

U. S. Agents Powers Wide.

Methods of prosecution and court action are tightened considerably through the new laws. Practically any sort of crime that can be construed as affecting interstate commerce, or any crime in which State lines are crossed, allows Federal agents to enter the case.

Speaking before a bar meeting in Washington, Cummings emphasized changes in court procedure which, he believes, will enable the Government to bring criminals to quicker justice.

"We know," he said, "that we are engaged in a grim business which will tax our courage and our resourcefulness to the very limit. In that sense the fight has just begun."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

In Search of Security.

IN his radio address the other evening, the President brought to the fore the sorely to be emphasized importance of social insurance. Most of us, hearing that nice, broad letter, think at once of doles (shameful idea to the lay mind) and of pensions (overlooked at once and sky-high taxes). We are, to put it mildly, not much impressed.

But I beg to say that such thinking exhibits the open-mindedness of a mud turtle. Frankly, not one in a hundred of us knows what social insurance is or what its functions and problems are. And just as frankly, the possible application of social insurance affects every one of us about 10,000 per cent more than, say, the independence of the Philippines—about which we are rather better informed.

To give us the ABC's of the XYZ's of all aspects of social insurance, there comes as able and forthright an exposition as I've ever read on so complex a matter—"The Quest for Security" (Holt, $3.50). Twenty years ago its author, I. M. Rubinow, wrote the pioneer American book on the subject. Today, after a lifetime of study and research, he sums up the whole and reports on the latest findings.

You will find it extremely readable, extraordinarily stimulating and forward-looking. Mr. Rubinow wears the heavy wading of vast statistics and graphs, of academic footnotes and meticulous references. He is perfectly capable of furnishing bushels of these, but in this book, with an authority we grant him implicitly, he comes out from behind such foliage and speaks plainly to the average intelligent reader.

The book is long (629 pages), but the fine quality of his thinking and argument and of his flexible, informal style makes one relish it continuously.

Roughed over every workingman's family ride the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—accident, illness, old age, and loss of a job. One family in ten which lives above the minimum "American standard of living" (an income of $2,500), the economic effects of these Horsemen may not always be inconsiderable. But to the nine who live below that standard, the Horsemen are all but death itself.

What can the various forms of social insurance do in defense? Mr. Rubinow gives considered and explicit answers. The picture, if decision and intelligence can make it possible, is one of hope.

Let me make one brief quotation which, by itself, may show Mr. Rubinow gives considered and explicit answers. The picture, if decision and intelligence can make it possible, is one of hope.

He is speaking of the most common objection to social insurance as a whole—that it "demoralizes" a population. "What are the signs of demoralization?" There are, he is sure, subjective tokens of morale. These are difficult to judge.

"But," he says, "there are objective symptoms and signs of physical deterioration and moral degeneration—crime, vice, suicide, perhaps indulgence in alcoholic liquors, unwillingness to return to work. Well, the crime record of Great Britain has always been vastly better than in the United States. Even ten years of depression did not produce any substantial increase. On the contrary, the average crime incidence has continued to decline. There have been no crime waves, no epidemic of racketeering, consumption of alcoholic liquors, and so on. As soon as the general economic condition began to improve, as soon as jobs began to open up, there was no difficulty in finding anxious applicants for any job. The army of unemployed decreased from some three millions in March of 1933 to two million, three hundred thousand in October—a decline of over 23 per cent in less than seven months."

Compare it with the situation in the United States, without a doubt, without a social insurance system. Racketeering, gangsters, gunmen, kidnaping, bootlegging, murders, year in and year out. How big a picture of this perennial reappearance of "crime waves" is due to the prevailing insecurity of the masses? And to reverse the argument—how is the lack of these manifestations of the breakdown of social life in European countries due to the structure of protective legislation which so strongly influences the daily life of the British or the German workman?

If you care to approach the subject of social insurance with a willingness to form your opinion in the light of the facts and their direct implications, you will find "The Quest of Security" a classic and invaluable book.

Leading From Start, Some Pomp Triumphs

Arlington Park, Ill., July 2 (Sp.)—Jumping to the front when the field was sent away in the feature event of the Calumet Farm today, some Pomp, racing for the Calumet Farm, owned by Warren Wright, of Chicago, galloped to a sparkling victory in the 6-furlong event.

Jockey Jack Westrope rode Some Pomp and kept the 3-year-old daughter of Pompey—Some More in front for the entire distance. H. C. McConnell's Dogmata made a challenge but could not overtake the leader. Mrs. Roy Carruthers' Mr. James finished third.

Golfers and the Courts.

A Supreme Court Justice has ruled that a shot of "Fore" especially by proxy, does not relieve a golfer of all further responsibility for subsequent events in the line of fire. (News item.)

A Pittsburgh golfer contended that his caddy had bellowed the conventional Scotch equivalent for "Take in the women and children! It's an Indian attack!" and that after that it was a case of every man for himself.

But the court handed down a $10,000 verdict against the golfer, thereby rocking the foundations of wild backswinging in the wide open spaces.

The hills and dells of America are crowded with golfers who have been proceeding in the theory that mayhem, manslaughter and murder are legitimate on fairways and in the rough if preceded by a four-letter word handed down from Scotch mythology.

In the case involved it was testified that the golfer didn't even bother to shout "Fore!" but had his caddy do it at the moment of impact. This, the court admitted, was better than giving the warning by postcard, but was something less than giving an even break to non-combatants within the range of hostilities.

During the trial it was shown that the golfer was using a wooden club to get out of the rough.

The judge ruled that this was not in itself criminal negligence but merely a gross display of overconfidence and a major manifestation of abnormal action.

It was shown during the trial that the defendant was playing in a sevensome. This is a violation of all golfing custom and rules. It was the spot for a stern decision, but the court weakened in its backswing and ruled that sevensomes, sixes and sevensomes did not constitute acts of negligence, although they certainly constituted impediments to progress.

The point is hereby referred to the traffic police. If something isn't done to bring back golf to the four-to-a-party limit it is going to be impossible to tell a golf match from a "Red" mass meeting.

New Wife Is Found In Bigamy Probe

Edgar Thomas Is Held by Danville Police.

Clifton Forge, Va., July 2 (Sp.)—Conducting an investigation at the request of the Danville authorities, who are holding Edgar Thomas in that city on a charge of bigamy, Clifton Forge police discovered that Thomas was married here on February 24, 1930, to Miss Nina Marjorie Nicely.

This was Thomas' second marriage, according to the Danville authorities, who placed him under arrest last week on the charge of having married Naomi Cobbler, of that city, without having obtained a divorce from his first wife, formerly Dolly Burgess, who lives in Spray, N. C., with their three children. Further investigation revealed the Clifton Forge marriage and that the Danville woman was his third wife.

In obtaining his marriage license here in 1930 Thomas gave his age as 27 and his place of birth as Oak Hill, W. Va.

Wore a neck brace for months. Went about his work with more pluck than has been shown in air annals since the war, in which he served as an Air Corps officer. Keen student of civil aeronautics, he reduced operating costs of aeronautics branch and rebuilt 20,000 miles of radio equipped and lighted airways. Has bestriding black Groucho Marx eyebrows and a Mexican bandit mustache slightly askew which disguise a gentle, genial manner. Quick, candid, personally popular, his hobby is a celebrity photo gallery, in which he displays radicals on left and reactionaries on right.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Spinach for the Gander Isn't Caviar for the Goose

By Robert Quillen

Once upon a time there were two sisters, named Mary and Mabel, who were much alike in appearance, but strangely different in all other particulars.

Mary was old-fashioned. She took care of all her complexion and had her hair fixed up at a beauty shop and wore the minimum of clothing prescribed by fashion, but she didn't smoke or drink or pet.

The idea of being pawed over by young males affected her much like stepping on a toad.

Mabel was modern. She believed in sex equality—which meant, by her definition, that a girl had the right to do anything a man got away with.

She smoked two packs a day and drank anything that was offered to her; and after she got a few drinks in her system, she cooperated heartily with any young male escort who had his mind set on petting.

All of the fellows liked Mabel. They took her places and showed her a good time, while Mary often remained at home for want of a date.

Among the fellows who liked Mabel was a rich youngster named Bill. He was regarded as a good catch and all the girls pursued him more or less.

Bill spoke kindly to Mary, but Mabel was the one he took out. Sometimes he said to his friends: "When I spend my jack on a girl, I expect to get my money's worth. I never take 'em out a second time if they won't pet."

But Bill's dad called him into the office one day and suggested that he settle down and amount to something, and Bill began to do some serious thinking. "I'll find a nice girl," he said, "and get married."

Did he ask Mabel to wed? Indeed, no. He called on Mary.

"But I thought you preferred a live-wire like Mabel," said Mary.

"For a wild party, yes," said Bill. "But for a wife I prefer you. When it comes to choosing a life companion to be the mother of his children, a man wants a mate who isn't showprow—one who hasn't petted every fellow in town. Be my wife, Mary. Give me my answer in one word."

"The reward of virtue," said Mary. "How nice. I know how you feel about getting an unused mate, for I also prefer that kind. So I'll give you my answer in one word. 'The word is scam!'" (Copyright, 1934.)

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

How to Enjoy Poetry.

One of the best books ever prepared on this subject has just been published. It is called "Poetry: Its Appreciation and Enjoyment," and is written by Louis Untermeyer and Carter Davidson. It is a tallish volume of over 500 pages; it combines admirable articles on how to read poetry, on the nature of poetry, and is also an excellent anthology, containing a vast number of English and American poems, old and new; and not the least valuable portion of the work is the list of reading appended to each chapter, where the individual reader may continue that special division of the subject at his own time and inclination.

But the book is much more than all this, though if it were not, it would still be worth buying and keeping. The object of the authors and their method in attaining it is set forth in the preface, as follows:

"To us the essence of poetry is not merely expression, but communion; a communication intended by a poet to a reader. This book is written that the communication may become more natural, pleasurable and profitable for students of general readers."

"The division of the volume into two books is part of the plan. The first book is devoted to the appreciation of poetry as a record of experience, an outlet of emotion, a transcript of life and its various activities—in short, a consideration of poetry based on its subject matter. The second book attempts to increase the enjoyment through an understanding of those devices by which poetry achieves its effects, through recognition of forms and patterns—a study of the structural element and the application of technique."

All the chapters in the book are illustrated by many selected poems, so that the reader has a very good anthology, in case he prefers poetry to any comment thereupon

Dictatorships Assailed in
Address Before Educators.

Facing an auditorium packed with delegates to the National Education Association convention, Dr. Glenn Frank, liberal president of the University of Wisconsin, last night assailed dictatorships, defended Federal "regimentation" as a preventive to business suicide, criticized curbs on production and branded "the current swing toward self-contained nationalism" as a "venture in madness."

The Pollyanna period is passed and Americans must make some major decisions that will determine our National destiny, Dr. Frank said. In an address entitled "The Alternative to Revolution," he propounded an answer to four questions which will largely determine "what life is to be like for us in the next quarter century."

On the first, whether America shall strengthen its democracy or surrender to dictatorship, the speaker held that the latter form of government is a delusion.

"Less than at any time in human history can we afford to put all our eggs in one basket," he said. "Less than at any time in human history can we afford to bully into silence the voice of corrective criticism, intimidate minority opinion and give unquestioned right-of-way to the green dogmatism of politics and economics that sprout so lavishly from the improvings of crisis-driven statesmen."

Emergency powers which have been assumed by the Administration were defended by Dr. Frank.

Roosevelt Defended.

"Varied forces of opposition have discreetly but determinedly criticized this move as a subtle assault upon democratic self-government. I find myself at variance with much that the National leadership has done with its emergency powers, but the wisdom and necessity of granting to the National leadership extraordinary powers in the midst of emergency can not, in my judgment, be justly disputed."

Venturing into paradox, the former editor of Century magazine said powers of legislative bodies must be restricted and "we must lodge greater detailed power and wider discretion in the executive."

"The executive power is always in the spotlight. When it runs amuck we can get it, as we can not get at the hydra-headed power of the legislature when it falls victim to caprice or corruption. These and like adjustments of the Democratic technique are the price we must pay for the avoidance of dictatorship."

Answering his second question, whether Government shall be by freedom or regimentation, he said the Government's role in economics will grow larger and larger.

"The day of a virtually anarchic individualism is dead."

The choice does not lie only between anarchic individualism and an all-embracing state, Dr. Frank said.

Russia, Italy Cited.

"We should think twice before we follow the lead of Italy, Russia and Germany, with their varied versions of the philosophy of the state above all. Our system of laissez-faire economics has manifestly run amuck. . . . But the easiest, the simplest and the laziest thing to do is to run to the government for salvation."

"That may work well for a time, if the luck of events shoves a strong man to the center of the political stage, as it has in Italy and Russia. . . . And, in the United States, the fates have certainly captained the state with a man of sincere and socially-minded impulses. But, frankly, I am not sure that we are ready to make even a Roosevelt receiver for economic America."

The depression climaxed the attempts of private initiative to commit suicide, he said, adding "some measure of social control of private enterprise has become imperative."

On the third point, whether plenty or scarcity shall prevail, Dr. Frank was direct and unparaphrasing in his criticism of the Roosevelt Administration's program to slash production and raise prices.

"To restrict production and to raise prices, as a general policy, is, to me, not liberalism, but reaction, not statesmanship, but surrender, not creative advance but cowardly retreat. . . . More goods at lower prices, not fewer goods at higher prices, is the logical goal of an age of science and technology."

"All the necessary tools are in our hands for emancipating the race from poverty, drudgery and insecurity. If we now fail to effect this emancipation, we shall go down in history as traitors to the tools of our own creation."

"We must be careful lest a program of stabilization turn out to have been a process of sterilization."

Dr. Frank's fourth alternative, involving the Nation's destiny, offered the choice between "realistic internationalism" and "economic monasticism of the nationalists."

Isolation Attacked.

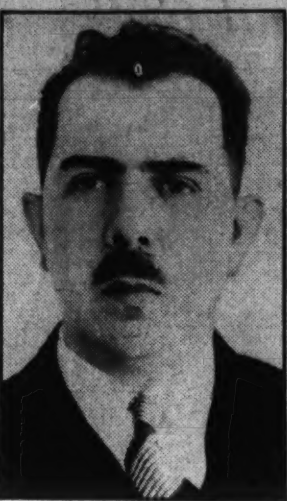

"Despite a rising tide of opinion to the contrary, I am convinced that the modern world can not be run effectively in terms of isolated economic nationalisms. The modern world is bound together by the like arms of rapid transportation, instantaneous communication and the frontier-crossing agencies of credit, contract, capital and corporate organization."

"We can not reverse this basic fact by transient ventures in swashbuckling nationalism."

Conceding that the League of Nations has its weaknesses, that American interests must be protected and that the United States must not be a "gullible Sir Galahad," Dr. Frank said he remains convinced "that the current swing toward self-contained nationalism is a venture in madness."

It will, if unchecked, bring primitive tribalism, injure American business and industry, doom commercial agriculture and make peas-

Shotgun Ends Roberts' Life

Coroner at Cumberland
Renders Verdict of Suicide.

Cumberland, Md., July 2 (Spl.). W. Milner Roberts, jr., 25, son of William Milner Roberts, sr., retired business man, was found in his room yesterday afternoon dead from a shotgun wound over his heart.

County Coroner Joseph B. Finan gave a certificate of suicide. Members of the family were absent at a cottage on the South branch of the Potomac. The maid heard the report of a gun and called in neighbors. Roberts was crouched in a chair. He had arranged a contrivance by which he connected the bathroom door with wires and string attached to the trigger. When he moved the door, the gun was discharged.

Young Roberts had acted peculiarly and had spells of mental aberration, owing, it is said, to a head injury sustained in a fall from an apple tree when a lad. Two weeks ago a note written by him was found in which he spoke of being tired of living and of contemplating self-destruction.

Roberts comes from prominent families. His paternal great-grandfather was the late Jacob Humbird, millionaire contractor who built railroads for Emperor Don Pedro in Brazil. His maternal grandfather was the late James A. Millholland, railroad president, coal operator and banker in this city. His father for many years was manager of the local trolley and electric system. Besides his father, a number of sisters and brothers survive.

ants of American farmers, the speaker predicted.

Brain Trusts came in for the approval of Dr. Daniel A. Poling, who shared the platform last night with the Wisconsin liberal. Dr. Poling is president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union.

American teachers constitute the real Brain Trust, he said, adding that he is for such trusts in Government, too.

"I have no enthusiasm for a certain hue and cry against the trained mind in Washington. We acknowledge our debt to the educator everywhere else. Then why not the scientist at the seat of the science of Government?"

Pleading for world peace, Dr. Poling took a leaf from NRA in submitting a "code of peacemakers," divided into five points. These were education, disarmament by agreement, halting the private manufacture of weapons, a general embargo of arms and support of President Roosevelt's proposal that nations enter into an international pact of nonaggression.

Dr. Wilmer To Leave Post At University

Reaches Johns Hopkins
Retirement Age; Will Reside Here.

Baltimore, July 2 (Spl.).—Offers by the trustees of the Johns Hopkins University to suspend the rule requiring faculty members to retire when they reach the age of 70 years were refused today by Dr. William H. Wilmer, director of the Wilmer Ophthalmological Institute at the University.

Dr. Wilmer, who reached the age of 70 yesterday, and who consequently is now automatically on the retired list, refused to take advantage of the trustees' offer and remain on the job.

He described the nine years he has spent in Baltimore as the happiest of his life, and he added that he felt as vigorous physically and mentally now as he ever did. But, he said, he would abide by the university's retirement rule.

He plans to return to Washington to live, and will do research work at Georgetown University, to which he formerly was attached.

For several weeks he will take a vacation at Ryton Farm, his estate near Millwood, Clarke County, Va., and thereafter he will spend most of his time at Georgetown University, where he will carry on work similar to that which has gained him the reputation of being America's leading expert on diseases of the eye.

E. L. Berry Buried At Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., July 2 (Spl.). Funeral services were held yesterday for Edwin Louis Berry, 18, who died Friday from injuries sustained in an automobile accident last week.

The youth was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Berry. He leaves five sisters, Clara, Isabelle, Estelle, Viola and Elnora Berry, and a brother, Garnett Mitchell Berry.

The accident occurred when Berry, driving his car from Fairview Beach to Fredericksburg, lost control of the machine on a curve. The car crashed over an embankment, killing Berry and injuring two companions.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 2 (Spl.). Nearly 3,000 American Legion members and their families of six counties, Franklin, Adams and York of Pennsylvania, and Washington, Frederick and Carroll of Maryland gathered at Pen-Mar Park near here yesterday for the second annual outing.

The park convention hall was packed to capacity to hear addresses by Caesar L. Aiello, department commander of Maryland, who urged members to carry on their work of preserving the democracy of America, Detachment Commander Benjamin Wolfson, of Baltimore, of the Sons of Veterans, traced the history and purpose of that organization. District Commander Herbert C. Hoover, of the Twenty-second Pennsylvania Congressional District, was chairman.

Otto F. Messner, commander of the Department of Pennsylvania, arrived late and spoke briefly from the bandstand. Special music was presented by the male quartet of the Waynesboro Post and the Junior American Legion Band of Chambersburg. Contests were held for the children.

THE WHISKIES that go into Four Roses are made by the costly "hand-made" process, using the finest grain and the famous limestone water found only in Maryland. Then these whiskies are naturally aged in charred oak barrels.

WINNER over 30 other brands in a "blind" taste-test! Winner over brands costing even twice as much!

That's the record of Four Roses. And that's why we sincerely believe you will discover in Four Roses just the kind of whiskey you've been looking for.

It's so rich and mellow it's a real pleasure to drink it straight. No shudders. No coughing. Four Roses goes down like honey! And if used with moderation, there's no hangover.

The reason? Four Roses is made of fine, naturally aged, hand-made Maryland whiskies. No tricks! And it's made by a company that knows how! For Frankfort has been making fine whiskey for four generations. Its yeast-culture—key-ingredient in making great whiskey—has been carefully guarded for 50 years.

You'll find Four Roses at any of the better liquor stores. In full pints and quarts. Get a bottle and try it! Insist on Four Roses at hotels and restaurants, too.

P. S. You can be certain of the purity of Four Roses. For it comes sealed in the patented Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed.

Try these other famous whiskies!

Society Set To Celebrate July Fourth

Exodus to Beach Resorts Will Begin Tonight From Capital.

Interrupted Week - End Activities Ready To Resume.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Today ends Washington society busily preparing for the Fourth of July holiday tomorrow.

The Fourth falling in the middle of the week prevented a desirable combination of the National holiday with the week-end holiday, and many who returned Sunday and Monday from resorts and summer homes for a brief two days of business are again on the march ready to return to the playgrounds to-night or tomorrow to resume for a day the pleasures of summer recreation.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas with the former's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. William D. Leahy spent the week-end at Rehoboth Beach, where the Charles Thomases with their sons, Charles, Jr., and Gregory, established themselves in their cottage for several weeks.

Early Monday they all returned to Washington leaving the two boys, and this afternoon they will motor back to the resort.

Plan Month's Stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thomas will take a party of guests to spend tomorrow at their cottage, to which they will move their four small children after the holiday, to spend a month, and Mr. and Mrs. Leahy will visit Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith had as their week-end guest at Rehoboth, Mr. Richard Hinson, who returned to the Capital Monday. This morning Mr. Smith accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Snow, Jr., who plans to spend tomorrow with Mrs. Snow and their young daughter, Claire, who went to the Virginia resort on Sunday to remain six weeks. Mr. Snow returned to Washington Saturday from a ten-day cruise aboard his boat, the Madelon.

A Grand Slam for an Average. When a Bridge partnership in a Rubber game bids and makes a Grand Slam, the thrill that accompanies it lasts for hours. All of us remember our Grand Slam contracts much better than we do our games and part-scores. Even in Duplicate Bridge the bidding and making of a Grand Slam, regardless of the suit, generally assures the player who made it of at least a tie for top-score. Judge, then, the astonishment of the North player on the hand below when, after bidding and making a Grand Slam with hearts as trump, she discovered that her score was half a match-point below the average obtainable on the board.

Old Rural Houses Receive Attention

Survey Shows Only 50% in Good Condition.

DILAPIDATED farmhouses are now coming in for their share of attention.

A recent housing survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture in 332 counties in 46 States was given to members of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at the annual meeting in Detroit, according to a Federal bulletin recently published.

In disclosing results of the survey, Wallace Ashby, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, said that of the 6,250,000 farmhouses in the country probably 50 per cent are in fairly good structural condition. About 15 per cent of the houses need complete replacements of foundations; 10 per cent need repair on exterior walls, 40 to 15 per cent need new floors, and 15 to 20 per cent need roof renovation.

"The average cost for new houses was estimated at about $2,300," says the bulletin, "but farmers are planning to spend an average of only a little more than $1,000 per house."

Educated Shouldn't Marry Uneducated, Asserts Dean

All a College Girl Needs to Make a Good Wife Is an Educated Husband, Is Miss Agnes Harris' Refutation of Charge.

COLLEGE women make excellent wives providing they marry educated men.

Thus does Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, president of the National Association of Deans of Women, answer Dr. D. P. Wilson of the Los Angeles Institute of Family Relations. "Every last one of those girls desires, deep down in her heart, to marry a man who will be the whole support of his family," declared Dean Harris. "All of them dream of being perfect homemakers and mothers. But they are forced to put aside their dreams and realize, only a few men in these times can make the entire living for their families if those families have ordinarily high standards. Rather than lower their standards, the girls do their share in earning the family's income."

The coed who marries before she receives her diploma usually cheats herself of the rightful enjoyment of college life, Miss Harris believes. "It is true," said the president of women Deans yesterday morning, "that the educated woman of today gives less of herself to marriage than the uneducated woman of the past. But that doesn't mean she is less successful as a wife."

Not in Background.

The college woman, with her knowledge and her many interests, refuses to be shoved completely into the background of her husband's life, Dean Harris has noticed. "But if the man is educated, if he is in step with modern standards of living, he doesn't want his wife to be tucked away in the background," she continued. "He wants a mate who will keep pace with him, who will grow with him in mentality through the years."

It is when the college girl marries an uneducated man with old-fashioned ideas the trouble begins, the dean is convinced. "There is no doubt that the coed of today has high standards. She wants a comfortable and attractive home. She wants to be able to lead an active social and civil life. And she certainly wants the means to rear and educate her children well."

These high standards of living are responsible for women in the business and professional world, Dean Harris believes. When she hears coeds chattering on the campus about lofty peaks they intend to scale in the professions, in business, she smiles to herself.

There is something of pity, something of regret and a deal of understanding in that smile because: "Every last one of those girls desires, deep down in her heart, to marry a man who will be the whole support of his family," declared Dean Harris. "All of them dream of being perfect homemakers and mothers. Frothy Chatter About Nothing, Discussions of Weather Passe

Mme. Recamier, Who Charmed Notables in Napoleon's Day, Was Blessed With Gift of "Talking Little, Listening Much" and Pleasing All.

More important than beauty, than money, and social prestige—personality. It has been recognized since the world began, but studied only in recent years.

Following is the second article in a series which analyzes personality—and offers constructive suggestions for cultivating it.

By Frances Mangum.

CONVERSATION has taken on a new wind resistant to the meaningless chatter about nothing, flighty discussions of parties, and trite judgments on the weather are definitely out of the mode. They are learning that the art of talking well and listening better is one of the best means of expressing personality.

A peep into the past might have taught them that. They might have learned from history and biography of the technique of women whose names are synonymous with personal magnetism.

There was Mme. Juliette Recamier, angelic enchantress of the Napoleonic era, known in history as the "virgin heartbreaker." She was the reigning hostess of her day, although she never served cocktails, put her refrigerator at her guests' disposal, nor encouraged ribald raucous. From the time she was young and famed for her beauty until her old age when she was penniless and forced to live in a garret on the outskirts of Paris, notables beat a path to her doorway.

Here's Her Technique.

And yet she had never kissed the blarney stone. She had no gift of gab. Her technique is best described in the words of Granier de Cassagnac: "Talking little, listening much, judging with acuteness, presiding over conversation with admirable discretion; questioning everyone with infallible accuracy on what he knew best, having the consummate art of making everyone pleased with himself, and consequently with her."

Mme. de Genlis says no one had ever mastered the art of listening as had Mme. Recamier. And St. Beuve calls her, in consequence, the veritable sister of charity in social life.

Although this is not the age of salons there is still a conspicuous place for the woman who knows how to talk, how to listen, what to say and why. Gertrude Stein, contemporary author, for instance, Her love of stimulating conversation resulted in the establishment in Paris of a "salon." There she gathered together literary, travelers and notables of wide variety and promotes brilliant discussions.

Imagine in such a salon a woman lapsing into eloquence over Junior's remark. As impossible as the remarks of the dinner partner who enthusiastically recounts blood-curdling details of her last operation.

Keep It General.

It is one of the chief duties of a hostess to check such guests and keep the conversation—at least in its beginning—general enough to allow all to participate, in the opinion of Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, one of Washington's outstanding hostesses.

"When guests are assembled around a table it should be their hostess' first thought to start some line of conversation which would not leave out anyone of them," she said. "Almost inevitably more concentrated topics will spring from this large one, like limbs from the main trunk of a tree."

The hostess must be interested in whatever is said, and the interest and enthusiasm which she displays is likely to be contagious," Mrs. Palmer continued. She was seated in the spacious living room of her Wardman Park apartment. Time after time she turned her eyes to the dining room as though imagining guests seated around the table and herself playing the part of hostess.

She smiled as she said, "analyzing a perfect hostess makes me wonder if I've ever practiced what I'm preaching."

Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, a general favorite for dinner parties because of her conversational "spark," spoke from the guests' viewpoint. "It seems to me," she said, "that

What was the magic of Queen Elizabeth's persuasion over me? Has any modern woman captured it? Read the answers in tomorrow's Post, in the third of a series of articles on what constitutes charm."

Soroptimists Urged To Work for Peace

BALTIMORE, July 2 (Spl).—Women should use their influence toward assuring world peace and in hastening economic recovery, it was declared here today by Mrs. Mercy Ellen Crehan, president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

Mrs. Crehan was addressing the third biennial convention of the National Soroptimist organization, being held at the Southern Hotel. Nearly 200 members of the organization from all sections of the United States are attending. The president's address was the high point of today's meeting. Yesterday the delegates had tea with Gov. Ritchie at the executive mansion in Annapolis, and then made a sightseeing tour of Baltimore.

Adult Schools Solution Hoped For at Meeting

Educator Tells of Many Difficult Problems in This Field.

ADULT education is in the spotlight today as never before. World-wide unrest is reflected in the disquietude of the individual. Faced with the problem of survival, the average adult is asking, "What can I do to improve myself?" It is in answer to such a question as this that adult education projects are being carried out throughout the United States.

These are conclusions of Miss Mary L. Guyton, supervisor of adult education, State department of education, Boston, and president of the adult education group of the National Education Association. A desire for self-improvement constitutes the motivating force behind adult education, according to Miss Guyton, while shorter working hours provide more time for individuals to fulfill that desire. Just how adult education can be carried on to the best advantage is, she said, the ever-present problem of teachers and directors.

Suggestions and Solutions.

"We are looking forward to this meeting to solve a number of problems," asserted Miss Guyton yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce before the first session opened. "By using the discussion plan in our meetings, we shall have the opportunity to profit by suggestions that will come from a number of adult educators. We plan, in fact, to carry out each session by a method applicable to any adult class. In the strictest sense, adults are no longer taught nor subjected to lectures such as one finds in the average college. They are given the opportunity to present their own problems, to discuss them, and to be guided along lines in which they can develop methods of meeting such problems."

Miss Guyton said many persons conceive of adult education as being purely vocational. "But while it often includes vocational phases," she went on, "as well as guidance along occupational lines, it has much wider applications. It should, first of all, provide what the individual needs, whether it be social adjustment, development of appreciation of art, literature, music, or vocational training."

Some More Problems.

"Some of our discussions will probably center around the problem of spending time teaching the underprivileged adult to read and write when so much more could be given to him in the same time through visual education, such as moving pictures and stereopticon slides."

She pointed out that methods would probably be suggested concerning the discussion of practical subjects with adult students in order that they might be helped toward such problems as how to dress their children, how to decorate their homes, and how to make the most out of all opportunities before them.

At the first session of this group, two women educators were among the six persons on the program. Miss Ruth Kotinsky, of the National Council of Parental Education of New York, talked on "Adult Education and the Social Scene" and was followed by Miss Marguerite Burnett, director of adult education at Wilmington, Del., who conducted the forum on proper relationships between adult and childhood education and other essential problems concerning adults.

Miss Maude Alton, director of adult education in Washington, is chairman of the program committee for this department of the National Education Association. Meetings of the group will continue today and tomorrow.

Streaky Gray Hair Can Be Fixed Easily

Neither Dye nor Bleach. Product Is Perfectly Harmless.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WOMEN who do not object to a head of hair fully gray frequently dislike that in-between stage of streaks. But they suffer it rather than submit to a complete dye. There's no reason why they should. The science of beauty has achieved a means of retouching the hair with a harmless vegetable liquid coloring, neither a dye nor a bleach. It comes off with each shampoo, and a new application is necessary.

Gray hair at the temples, which often makes a woman appear from five to ten years older than she is, or uneven streaks on the top of the head that present a picture of unbecoming incongruity, can be easily and effectively hidden by this means of retouching.

With the liquid comes an applicator topped off with a sponge. When the gadget is about half filled with the coloring which seeps through the sponge, it then serves as a kind of paint brush.

This "instant liquid," as it is called because of the rapidity with which it works, is available in dark blond, golden blond, ash blond, warm brown, henna, light Auburn, dark Auburn, light brown, medium brown, chestnut brown, dark brown and black.

Inasmuch as the preparation comes in such a variety of colors it suits a variety of rather extraordinary needs. For instance, it tones down and takes away ridiculous discolorations from hair that has been over-hennaed. Hair that has been sunburned and bleached may be smoothed out in color by just one careful application.

Deities Bay Windows.

Bay windows, the opprobrium of men and women alike, are easy to acquire but hard to lose. A large manufacturing concern suggests that besides plenty of exercise and a sensible abstention from fattening foods a person try their new messenger.

It looks wicked enough, as though one roll from its tractor tread would take off a couple of pounds. One roll covers or massages 42 square inches, stimulates the skin and tends to break down a lot of surplus fatty tissue.

In no way is it injurious. Nearly all physicians say a massage of this nature provides a happy means for giving the skin a daily dozen.

Modern Lash Miracles.

If any one had told grandmother 40 or 50 years ago that the time would come when a woman could wake up in the morning with eyelashes thin, short and scant and go to bed that same evening with lashes long, dark and lustrous, thick and curly—she would have called them a fibber at least.

But the time has come when this sort of miracle takes place, arouses no undue attention and costs little to perform.

A downtown shop has some false lashes which come in a little box with some glue. A person takes 10 or 15 minutes, very carefully glues the lashes on her lids, applies make-up over the narrow band which fastens them on and takes the scissors and trims the lashes down to a becoming length.

Facial Depilatory.

Women with a little growth of hair on their faces are frequently at a loss as to what to do about it. They either fear electrical treatments, or they can't afford them, and they hesitate to risk the stronger depilatories on their sensitive skins, where there's no way to hide red blotches if they happen to result.

For the special benefit of these people a depilatory company has put out a hair remover recommended for use on the face. It's even known as the "facial hair remover." It's a fine fragrant powder that only needs to be dampened to be applied. After barely a minute it can be removed. And after it's washed away all traces of disfiguring hair have disappeared.

Sherbet Dishes.

Sherbets are always popular in hot weather and this naturally results in increased sales of sherbet dishes. A downtown store has some especially nice ones. Their top portions are heavy glass that fits into chromed detachable goblet bases. These, of course, are proof against tarnish even during a damp summer. They sell just now for $1.

Bottle Tops.

In the summer, when refrigerators are filled with cooling beverages, there's a definite need for the tight-fit bottle cap which keeps effervescent liquids from "dying." But so few people feel like paying the 25 cents they're always cost.

And now there's no reason why they should. A downtown store has just received a batch of new caps which sell for 5 cents apiece.

Chicken Dishes Appeal to Home Cooks Who Find Them Tasty, Easy to Prepare Summer Versions Include Salad, Loaf and a la King.

TUESDAY WOMAN BARRETT

By Anna Barrett.

HALVES of young chicken browned delicately under the flame; chicken a la king with crisp buttered toast; chicken salad with good mayonnaise or crisp lettuce; chicken with almonds in a jelly loaf—these are summer versions of the chicken story that all chicken enthusiasts (including Mrs. Calvin Coolidge) will endorse.

Take the following chicken salad, for example. (The pineapple and nuts make it even easier than usual to take).

Chicken Salad.

For this you need 3 cups diced, cooked chicken, 1 cup blanched almonds (chopped with sharp knife while still a little soft from blanching); then browned in 1 tablespoon butter; 1 cup sliced celery; 1 cup diced fresh (or drained, canned) pineapple. Mix these ingredients and chill 1 hour. Then mix with ½ cup mayonnaise (first combined with ½ cup cream, whipped).

Chicken a la King.

Chicken a la king (that perennial party favorite) starts with ½ pound mushrooms caps cooked slowly in ½ cup boiling water till tender, then drained. Put these in top of double boiler with 2 cups chicken (cut in 1-inch pieces), 2 tablespoons minced pimiento and 2 tablespoons minced green pepper. In another pan melt 1 tablespoon butter or chicken fat, blend in 1 tablespoon flour (first mixed with ½ teaspoon pepper and ½ teaspoon salt—if chicken stock is not already well-seasoned).

Then slowly stir in 1 cup chicken stock (broth or bouillon) and 1 cup cream. Stir over low fire till sauce thickens. Next, pour this sauce over ingredients in top of boiler and cook over hot water about 20 minutes.

Jellied Chicken Loaf.

Another favorite for parties and Sunday suppers is jellied chicken loaf, made life thus: First soften 2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin in ½ cup cold water. Then dissolve it in 2 cups hot chicken stock or bouillon. Next add ½ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon celery salt, and let cool.

Then rinse a loaf pan (about 8 by 3 by 4 inches) with this gelatin mixture, so as to leave a thin coating of it over the inside of the pan. Let this get firm. When the rest of the gelatin mixture gets about to the consistency of unbeaten egg-white, fold in 2 cups diced, cooked chicken; ½ cup chopped blanched almonds; ¼ cup each chopped pimiento and green pepper.

Then arrange some cooked asparagus tips (about 3 inches long) tips down, along sides and ends of pan.

Many Tasty Delicacies Can Be Made of Canned Fowl.

Between these place thick slices of hard-cooked eggs. Then very carefully so as not to disarrange eggs and asparagus turn in the chicken mixture. Chill till firm.

Send for More Recipes.

But, of course, there are many other good ways to have it. My bulletin "World-Famous Ways to Cook Chicken" tells how to fry chicken; how to cook it in a Dutch oven; how to smother it; make it into curried, paprika, Italian or Maryland chicken. Another bulletin, "Chicken and Duck in Tempting Dishes," tells how to roast these fowls; how to make gravies for them and other suitable dishes such as hominy croquettes to serve with them. To get these bulletins promptly, please be sure to inclose 12 cents in loose stamps (6 cents for each bulletin) together with self-addressed envelopes and coupon below.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 10:45 until midnight.

July 3 may prove an exceedingly busy one, and has excellent money-making possibilities. Watch the telephone carefully, for there is a possibility of a call being received that may lead to some very desirable business. It might be advisable in making representations to be conservative, and not let your enthusiasm carry you away into the realm of exaggeration. Your sense of justice might be appealed to on this date. Do not let sentiment sway you in your decision, but decide entirely according to the merits of the case upon which you are requested to express an opinion. So-called activities possibly will be responsible for your meeting some very delightful people, whom it might be advisable for you to cultivate. Avoid controversial discussions; they can accomplish no good, and may be productive of hard feelings. The evening of July 3 should prove the sort of lovers' delight in, so it might prove safe to make love "by the yard."

If a woman and July 3 is your birthday, you probably thrive on romance, either in reality or in the land of dreams. It might add to your happiness to know that there is a very good chance of there being a great deal of actual romance in your life. You should be able to either write excellent poetry or play some musical instrument exceedingly well, and one or the other might open up profitable fields of activity for you. You have all the attributes a successful wife should possess, so married life offers you another successful career. There is the possibility of your receiving good news through either a letter or a friend.

The child born on July 3, as it grows up, will display a decidedly artistic nature especially where music is concerned. Painting may also interest it. It is advisable to give the child encouragement and the opportunity of perfecting itself in the line in which it evinces the greatest amount of interest. Care should be exercised in the selection of its instructors. It may be very sensitive, so be careful how you criticize, as lack of confidence may result.

The man born on July 3 is inclined to be studious, and as a rule, books, music, and art have a far greater appeal than sports. If born on this date, journalism or the legal profession offer opportunities. You should make an excellent husband, and if not already married, the right girl is waiting for you, so give her the opportunity to make you happy.

Successful people born on July 3: John Singleton Copeley, artist; Richard H. Clarke, author and lawyer; Henry Hiltzcock, lawyer; Mary Lou Dickinson, author; Samuel W. Johnson, chemist; David McC. Smith, inventor. (Copyright, 1934, Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Versatile Outfits Ideal For Week-End Visitor

This Summer's Smart Shopper Can Easily Pack a Complete and Practical Wardrobe Into One Suitcase.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 3—The perfect guest, so the week-end hostess thinks, arrives with everything she is going to need and leaves nothing behind her when she departs. And this summer her luggage doesn't require the services of two strong men to carry it.

For most of the summer's week-ends, a complete wardrobe can easily be packed in one suitcase. That's because fashions are such that one costume can do the work of two. Or combinations of costumes can be made with one or two basic items.

Take the two-piece dress, for instance. It's in fashion and it certainly is a good fashion for the week-end when one likes to travel light. Choose it in white or a pastel color or with a top which is soft rather than tailored (as is the top of the two-piece dress sketched). Then as it is you have a perfect dress for the afternoon and for family dinner.

Carry along with you a sweater, or a twin pair of them, in a color which matches or pleasantly contrasts with the skirt of the dress. There's a less dressy, but just as attractive outfit.

Or tuck into your bag one of those new jacket-blouses of linen. This is one of the double duty fashions, for it is cut so it may be worn as either a blouse, alone, or as a jacket over a dress or another blouse.

This jacket-blouse with the skirt of your two-piece dress makes another outfit. Or wear it with the entire dress.

One of the most practical outfits for week-ends is the three-piece sports costume—shorts, shirt-like blouse and skirt.

When the skirt is on, it's a grand golf dress. Without the skirt, the shorts and blouse are ready for tennis, or just for sunning. Then you have the skirt alone to wear with sweaters.

Jacket dresses of linen or cotton serve two purposes when the jacket is knee or three-quarter length and swaggy. The jacket can then be worn with other dresses and you need not pack an extra one.

If your hostess goes in for formal entertainment, then one of those chiffon or marquisette or crinkled organdie dresses which can be used for a garden party and also for a formal dinner dress should be included.

Select one with a cape or jacket and the dress alone will be formal enough for a summer dance. (Copyright, 1934.)

Dual-purpose frocks of the types described may be found in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores. (Copyright, 1934, by Chicago Tribune.)

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche.

D. R. BAXTER breathed deeply; his heart pounded with excitement. This was what he had wanted; his application had been before the foundation for 14 months and unexpectedly it had been acted upon. To give his life to people who needed desperately the services that he could give. To combat disease in a land of ignorance and superstition and misery! It was the thing toward which he had looked since he had entered medical school. He had also been driven. As his taxi took him downtown to the Grand Central Station where his bags awaited him, he thought of Millie.

It had been decent and fine and chivalrous of Millie to tell him where she was, but it had also been ridiculous. Martha Blaisdell was in love with Bert Cranston; she was not the kind of girl who could ever have looked at his gangling figure, at his freckled face and found him attractive. And he was glad that he was going thousands of miles away; where he would never encounter her, where at length she would become nothing more than a dim, sweet memory.

Bert Cranston got off the train at Blairport, Miss., at 7 o'clock in the morning. He took a taxi to a dingy commercial hotel, eying with distaste the uninteresting streets through which he passed.

He breakfasted, not too well, at the hotel, engaged a room, freshened himself with a bath, and at 10 o'clock a taxi deposited him at the easily ascertained address of Mrs. John Gray.

To the servant who answered his ring he gave his name and asked to see Miss Tranter.

"Miss Tranter isn't in."

"She'll be back soon? Perhaps I could wait for her."

"Not until Monday night," said the maid.

Cranston's heart skipped a beat. It had taken all the will power he possessed to delay a couple of hours before calling. This was Saturday morning. How could he endure waiting three days and two nights? "Where is she?" he asked.

Away on Trip.

"She and Mrs. Gray and Miss Salie left an hour ago on a motor trip. I know they're going to see Niagara Falls, but I don't think they'll stop in any hotel here. They're visiting friends of Mrs. Gray in Buffalo."

Disconsolately Cranston returned to his hotel. There was no use in going to Buffalo. The only thing he could do was muster what patience he could and wait until Monday night.

Saturday was torture and Sunday was agony. But Monday was brightened by the fact that the evening would bring Martha.

It did bring her. At 7 o'clock he phoned the Gray mansion and asked for Miss Tranter. In a moment he heard her voice.

"Bert!" she cried.

"You knew it was I?" he asked.

"If the maid hadn't told me ten minutes ago that you had called I'd have recognized your voice, you silly thing. Did that wicked old Agatha give me away?"

"You'll see me!" he asked.

"I can't see you," she answered. "I can't see you. As to dinner, a governor must mind her place, you know. But if you'll come out after dinner—and we dine early—I'd love it."

"In an hour," he told her.

Mrs. Gray and her daughter, exhausted by the long motor trip, had retired when Cranston arrived. A servant showed him into a living room and he was alone with the girl he loved.

Not Sure of Love.

He walked to where she sat; she rose and his arms went around her. "How could you do such a thing to the man you love?" he demanded. "You do love me, don't you?"

"I'm not sure, Bert," she replied. He released her, but she smiled. "It will be my pleasant task to make you certain, Martha," he told her.

"I wonder," she said. "I've had time to think. I've been wondering. I still haven't made up my mind. I came here because I had to earn my living, but also because I wanted to get away. I wanted to have a chance, without any pressure upon me, to make up my mind. Bert, I haven't made up yet."

"Is that fair to me?" he asked

Radio Waves and Ripples

THE phone rang the ether night and a voice inquired why he hadn't heard a speech by Senator Borah, the great man from the potato State. The announcement, the voice said, was carried in the news columns of a local paper. But at the appointed hour: no soap!

Recalling that Borah had been scheduled to speak once before and at the last minute N. B. C. had canceled, the voice scented treason, collusion and connivance. . . charged that it was part of a pro-administration plot and that it was just another example of how far the New Deal is going to gag its critics.

This struck us as downright interesting. Thought you'd like to know about it. A quick check with N. B. C.'s local station manager revealed that the Republican "Lone Wolf" had never had a radio speech of his canceled.

. . . that he was on the point of launching his wilderness voice with more gusto than ever and that N. B. C. hadn't played host to the long-haired champion since March 22, when he spoke on "America Must Choose."

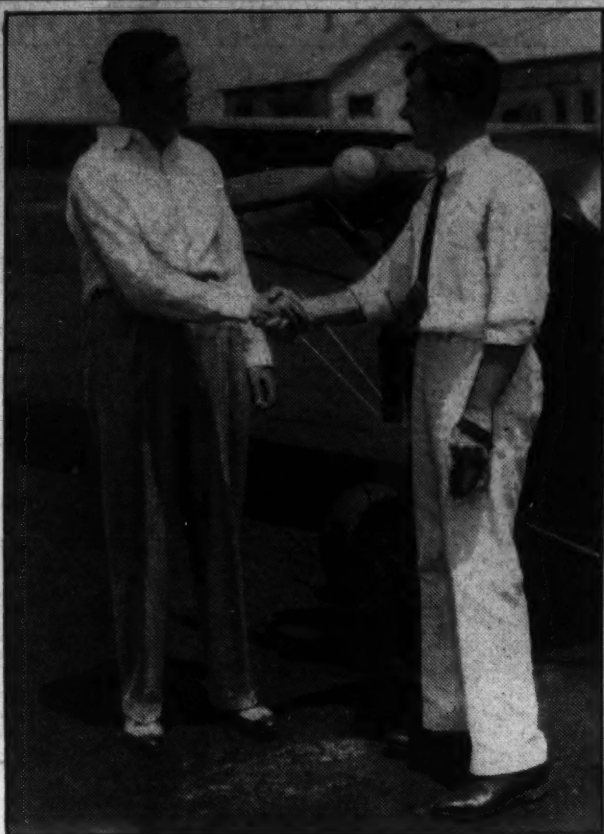

And so taking strong exception to certain phases of the New Deal and various legislative acts of the recently adjourned Congress, Mr. Borah will clear his throat tomorrow night at 10:30 o'clock from N. B. C.'s studios here.

N. B. C. minds attempted to persuade Mr. Borah to devote his remarks to some phase of the currently dramatic unfolding of events in Germany. The Senator from Idaho shook his shaggy head and said, "maybe."

GODFREY'S (WJSV) two-place monoplane with its flimsy wires and jaunty hood didn't look so good to James Melton, (C. B. S. tenor). And Melton's 80-foot power boat, fresh from its battle with Atlantic waves, didn't look so good to Godfrey. So they decided not to give each other a break.

The tenor and his wife arrived here Saturday and Godfrey immediately offered the extra seat in his snappy little plane to Melton for one of those rides aloft that only the man from WJSV can enjoy. Mrs. Melton, remembering a recent flight over the Channel that proved fatal, insisted that the Melton voice was of more importance than Godfrey's skill at the controls.

And Godfrey couldn't exactly save a ride over Potomac waves in the Melton yacht. So they shook hands (see cut) and adjourned to the Capital Yacht Club for the draught that cheers. But take it from Ann Gillis, publicity... Columbia's personality ace really can make the thing fly. This department has a standing invitation to be convinced of this. But radio columnists, like the trooper whose heart is breaking, must go on, and on, and on. So we've decided to stay on the turf for a while.

They couldn't take it! Arthur Godfrey (right), WJSV's entrepreneur, and James Melton, C. B. S. tenor currently appearing at the Earle Theater, are congratulating each other . . . Melton because he didn't go up in Godfrey's airplane, and Godfrey because he turned down a bid to ride in Melton's seagoing yacht.

GERTRUDE NIESEN, C. B. S. exotic personality currently contraltoing at Loew's Fox, has decided to play "Lady Bountiful" to the Capital's youngsters.

Tomorrow at 11 a. m., with the assistance of Skippy, Columbia's entertainer at 3:15 p. m. daily, she will release from the base of the Washington Monument about 100 balloons. Being inflated with gas or something they will immediately soar. Boys and girls are invited to chase the balloons and if any of them are caught and returned to WJSV the capturer will receive one grand prize with the compliments of Skippy.

Ripples.

You read here recently that N. B. C.'s Tintype Tenor would present songs reminiscent of the "Gay nineties." It took him a long while to make up his mind, as bustles, gray derbies and horse cars got in the way. But Jack Parker will introduce the series today at 6:15 p. m. over an N. B. C. network with such favorites as "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet" and "The Bird on Nellie's Hat" . . . the Beauty Box Theater presents De Koven's operetta "Robin Hood" with John Barclay and Gladys Swarthout in the leading roles of Maid Marian and Robert, the Earl of Nottingham, in a special production today at 9 p. m. on WRC

. . . Wayne King, the Waltz King, returns to the air today at 7:30 p. m. on WRC following a vacation on the West Coast. . . Pat Kennedy, the "unmasked tenor," formerly a member of Ben Bernie's orchestra, will rejoin the Old Maestro as guest artist today at 8 p. m. . . and WJSV will put on Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, on the "Party Issues" series at 10 p. m. Next week Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, will face the mike.

Whitecaps.

One-Way Fare Ordered To East Potomac Links

A change in fare rates on the Hains Point bus line to permit passengers to buy a one-way ticket from the Treasury to the East Potomac golf course, was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The one-way ticket will cost 15 cents. In the past only round-trip tickets at 25 cents were available. The order does not change the round-trip fare.

BLACKIE BEAR

Jay Bird Tells Who-Who Goodbye

Where do you reckon Who-Who Owl was when Bully Calf was butting Uncle Joe into the fig tree? Well, if you really want to know I will tell you.

He was sitting right up in the old walnut tree. He flew up there just as Bully came around and began eating the apples, and he was looking around to find a nice young chicken for his supper. He had his eye on the chickens, and just waiting for Bully to get through his supper and go on away before dropping down on his own supper. He was still waiting when Uncle Joe came out with his gun to shoot Blackie Bear, and he never had seen anything funnier than that butt that Bully gave him. It was all he could do to keep from hollering, "Who-Who butted Uncle Joe!" but he didn't want Uncle Joe to know that he was there, and so he just sat up in the tree and snickered.

After Bully and Uncle Joe were out of the way, Who-Who dropped down and picked up his chickens and flew back home. He ate his supper and then thought he would take a little nap, even if he did hardly ever go to sleep before day.

But he couldn't do much sleeping, and by the time it was the least bit light he woke Jay Bird to tell him about the funny thing that happened to Uncle Joe. It was just too good to keep, and he had to tell somebody.

Jay Bird certainly did laugh over it, and he said he must go back and tell Blackie about it. He knew it would make Blackie laugh himself weak to think about what a little calf had done to big Uncle Joe. So he told Who-Who what a good time he had had on his visit, and then he started back to the mountains. But he went by Uncle Joe's house, for he must see that calf that looked so much like Blackie, and that had butted Uncle Joe into the fig tree. He saw the calf, and then he had to laugh some more, for he certainly did look a lot like Blackie, even in the day time.

Uncle Joe wasn't around, but when he got over to Mr. Man's house, he was there. They were talking about Blackie, but do you think Uncle Joe told Mr. Man about meeting him last night? He certainly did not. What he did tell him was that he was tired of hunting all over the country for a bear that knew so well how to dodge and keep out of the way of the dogs and guns. And he had too much work to do at home to hunt any more, and then called his dog and went home.

Jay Bird looked all around Mr. Man's place, and he found plenty of things to tell Blackie about. There were pigs and pigs and pigs, besides young turkeys and goslings and guinea. My, my, wouldn't these things look good to Blackie Bear and Dr. Coon? Well, he could tell them about them, anyway.

He flew around from tree to tree for some time, and got a good dinner of acorns and holly berries. Then he got a drink of water and started off for the mountains. (Copyright, 1934, by The Washington Post Publishing Co.)

Foreclosures On Farms Cut To Slight Gain

Federal Land Banks List
$82,939,000 in Loans
Held in May.

During the past year the number of farms owned outright by the Federal Land banks and subject to redemption by the borrower increased less than 5 per cent, whereas during the calendar year of 1931 the numbers increased approximately 50 per cent and in 1932

The governor also said that the farms held by the banks in May amounted to $28,939,000, which was an increase of a little over 2 percent about $1,920,000 over the amount carried in May, 1933, when the Farm Credit Administration was organized.

"The policy of the Farm Credit Administration," stated Gov. Myers, "has been not to foreclose upon any borrower who is doing his honest best to meet his obligations, who is not able to do so, and who has no income, if any, after meeting necessary living expenses, and who is not adequately caring for his security. The majority of the farms have been decided voluntarily by the banks or their owners, or are a result of foreclosure upon farms which have been abandoned by their owners. The number of farms held by the banks by the land banks or held by them subject to redemption by the borrower totals 22,678. These farms were acquired over a period of years. The total is about 1,000 given up in a year ago. Also, the period of redemption on a rather large number of farms expired during the year. The Federal Land Bank Board and the Land Bank Commission together now hold 20 to 25 per cent of the total farm mortgage debt in the United States, data obtained from officials in the Federal Reserve in the United States indicate the foreclosure action instituted by the Federal Land banks during the last seven months has constituted only 1 to 7 per cent of the total farm foreclosures instituted throughout the United States by all institutions and individual."

N. Y. Bank Stocks Are Held Steadily

New York, July 2.—New York City bank stocks held very steady during the past week. Upset Features At Women's Title Nets

FEATURED by the unexpected defeat of Mrs. Dorette Miller, for years one of Washington's outstanding players, the annual Women's District Championships will now be contested at the Columbia Country Club with three of the four seeded players advancing to the second round without the least deal of trouble.

Mrs. Miller, who headed the and Joe Cronin in the great national game between the National and the American Leagues scheduled for July 10 next at the Polo Grounds. In this article, this certain sports columnist, whom many call "Red Williams," has selected the eighteen men designated by popular vote to play in this game, or at least start it, may or they may not do so, but he has given his mental processes of the Messrs. Cronin and Terry.

With Gerdie Phillips leading the main lineup with him with 6,829 points, the nine pitchers was closer, but, has a 21,000 and Gomez majority over these two.

"I don't think," says Red Williams, "that Hubbell to start the game one another, no matter what mental arithmetic Cronin may do in the past, but not very far from the past."

Busy Production Season Promises Exhibitors in Excess of 633 Feature Films

Full Schedules Made Known at Sales Meetings

Higher Admissions Sought; President to See Films; Theater Chatter.

A year of extraordinary production activity confronts the motion picture industry, if present plans are carried out.

With Columbia Pictures the only one of the larger companies not yet to have held its 1934-35 sales convention, the industry may be said pretty thoroughly to have divided its projected activities for the ensuing 12 months. Seven major companies, to date, have promised a total of 350 feature pictures for the impending season—a complete misnomer for any entertainment enterprise that functions without cessation 52 weeks a year—and have detailed titles, stories and principal players for 277 of them.

Concomitantly, 25 independent producers and distributors have signified their intention of releasing at least 243 features for 1934-35, giving the Nation's exhibitors an available 593 pictures from which to choose for their new year. With Columbia's expected 40 features in addition, the total output of features will be raised to the imposing figure of 633. This falls little short of being at the rate of two features a day throughout the year.

May Exceed Estimates.

The figures may even exceed these expectations, for Columbia, as indicated, has made no formal announcement of plans and there are several independents, also, that have made public no release schedules as yet.

Concurrently with the announcement of production and distribution plans for the coming year, there is manifesting itself among the leaders of the industry a concerted policy of stepping up admission charges to keep abreast of returning prosperity.

According to well-grounded reports published in the June 30 issue of Mr. Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald, the Warner Brothers have openly declared for a drive to increase admission scales and, as soon as necessary organization can be effected, will launch it. Coincidentally, the company will seek to abolish the showing of "double-feature bills" by withholding product from houses charging less than 15 cents in the afternoon and 20 cents at night.

The "double-feature" bill is something with which Washington has not been appreciably afflicted.

Contracts May Stipulate.

The M. P. H. goes on to say that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contracts for the new season may so far as stipulate that its features will only be available to houses charging not less than 15-cent admissions. The 15-cent minimum admission suggested, itself as a result of improved business conditions in the Chicago territory and other sections of the country.

The foregoing pertains only to feature picture production, distribution and exhibition. If the total output of short subjects were to be gone into exhaustively, the installation of latest improved tabulating machines would be necessary. For instance, M-G-M alone will release 181 short subjects during the next year.

Carry that proportion all the way down the line and it will give you a rough idea.

One learns from the Loew executive offices in the Fox Theater that City Manager Carter Barron, who left town only a few minutes ago to drive Mrs. "Chic" Barron and Carter Teis Barron, Jr., to their ancestral home, will be back at his desk tomorrow morning. "Chic" and Baby Carter Teis, Jr., will remain in the South for several more weeks to afford the junior member of the family further opportunity to familiarize himself with his distinguished Georgian ancestry.

Pastime for President.

Those who imagine that President Roosevelt, aboard the U. S. S. Houston on a vacation trip into the Caribbean to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, through the Panama Canal and on to Hawaii, will have nothing to do during his hours of relaxation but sit on deck and watch the flying fishes are sorely mistaken.

In addition to a vacation library of 300 books, the ship's motion picture library will carry 40 feature pictures and 35 or 40 short subjects, some of them not yet generally released.

The films were supplied by United Artists, Warner Brothers, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, RKO-Radio, Universal, Paramount and Columbia. Each film aboard is said to have been checked against a list of more than 300 features President Roosevelt has seen during the past year. Ten of the films have already been viewed by the President, but are being taken along to be shown for the particular enjoyment of the ship's crew.

List of Titles.

The features aboard the Houston are as follows: "The Last Gentleman," "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," "The Affairs of Cellini," "The Personality Kid," "Dr. Monica," "Fog Over Frisco," "Return of the Terror," "The House on 58th Street," "Baby Take a Bow," "Shirley Temple's latest," "Handy Andy," "Will Rogers' latest," "Spitfire," "Tarzan and His Mate," "Twenty Million Sweethearts," "Nana," "Manhattan Love Song," "Melody in Spring," "Speedways," "Half a Sinner," "Little Miss Marker," "The World Moves On," "Murder on the Blackboard," "Cockeyed Cavaliers," "Crime Doctor," "Gambling Lady," "The Mystery of Mr. X," "Viva Villa," "Operator 13" and "I'll Tell the World."

Still More.

"Counsellor at Law," "Scarlet Sinner," "The Most Dangerous Game"

A Star Is Deluded By Setting

When Carole Lombard, one of the blonde beauties of the screen, permitted the "still" cameraman to snap this picture of her it was probably in the thought that the mantel of the grate would look well on her shoulders! The pose was made between scenes on the set of Paramount's "Now and Forever."

Straight From the Studios

Eddie Cantor to Show Europe to Extensive Entourage; Alan Hale Once Sang With Metropolitan Opera; Miss Kingsley's Boulevard Chat.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, July 1.—When Eddie Cantor finishes work on "Kid Millions," for Samuel Goldwyn, he will leave for his first visit to England in nine years. His wife, their five daughters, his father-in-law, Bennie Holtzman; his manager, and Frenchie, his major-domo, will go with him. They expect to leave in September.

Eddie thinks it might be cheaper to charter a yacht. "Travel used to be a great adventure," said Eddie yesterday. "You had a heart-breaking farewell with your family. You might never see them again. What was Yuma going to be like? Would the people in Newark like you? But the newsreels, the travelogues and the rotogravure sections have changed all that. You know Rome as you know your own back yard, and people who have never been in London have their favorite London street."

Eddie will play two benefits for charity in England.

Besides London, Eddie will visit Holland, Belgium and Switzerland with his family. He has never been in the first two countries and he wants to show Switzerland to his eldest daughter, Marjorie.

"I've heard that song about the little 'Dutch mill' so much that I want to investigate and see for myself the song writers have been lying," remarked Eddie.

Pertinent And Impertinent.

Alan Hale was once a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and he admits that he still can and does sing.

Heard on The Boulevard.

Mrs. Ralph Morgan entertaining at luncheon in honor of her daughter Claudia's betrothal to Robert Shippee, alumnus and explorer, the wedding to occur July 22.

In Life. "Twentieth Century," "The Party Over," "Murder at the Vanities," "Many Happy Returns," "Looking for Trouble," "The Key," "Now I'll Tell," "Sadie McKee" and "Thirty-Day Princess."

A special portable loudspeaker has been added to the Houston's regular equipment, in the event the President experiences any difficulty hearing from his box high over the well deck, where the rest of the audience is seated. The screen, a 9 by 11 foot sailcloth, will be 45 feet from the President's box—not an exorbitant distance as projection "throws" go.

One of Saturday afternoon's cordial callers was Miss Ruth Abbott, leading woman of this season's National Theater Players, who closed at the National Saturday night. Miss Abbott is one of the most enlivening and most gracious personalities I know. Although looking as cool and untroubled as an orchid on ice, she confessed that last Thursday, Friday and Saturday had pretty well disabused her mind of the notion that she would like to spend the entire summer in Washington—a thought that was engendered when she arrived here last spring with a heavy snow on the ground.

So she departed the Potomac shores Saturday night for New York, where she will plan a midsummer vacation, preparatory to seeking a part in some Broadway production later on. One gathers that, for the time being, at least, Miss Abbott would not be annoyed by the possibility of dodging the neces-

The ceremony will take place in the beautiful patio of the Morgan home, the couple to stand before a flower-embowered shrine. Present at the luncheon, given in the patio, besides the bride-to-be, were Helen Twelvetrees, Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, Mrs. Walter Wolf, Adele Rowland, Mrs. Wilfred North, Mrs. Edmund Brees, Mrs. James Gleason, Mrs. Mary Thomson, Mrs. Crawford Kent, Mrs. Joseph Santley, Mrs. Otto Kruger and others. Claude told us that she and Mr. Shippee will take a honeymoon trip through the Panama Canal. Desserts were dainty—oranges filled with orange ice and decorated with orange blossoms. Helen Twelvetrees told about playing golf. Her mother, an accomplished golfer, had just come from the East. "No, I myself don't play very well," said Helen. "But the game is like acting—even if you don't make good at it, you always hang on, thinking that some day you will."

Mrs. Robinson said she brought her daughter, Jeanne, West with her for the summer. Jeanne is not least interested in acting, but is to become a social service worker, and will take a course in this subject at the University of Chicago next year. Mrs. Gleason says that son Russell is all thrilled because, back there in Ogunquit, Me., where he has joined a stock company for the summer, he will appear in "Twelfth Night" with no less great an actress than Maude Adams. Ed Brees dashed in to kiss his wife good-by, being on his way to location for a picture.

Alan Hale, former "heavy," says that since his success in "Little Mag, What Now?" in a dashing and sympathetic role, he is through "stepping on flowers and kicking cats."

He is up for two important leading roles at Universal. And, besides, he is going to talk on the radio on three inventions in which he is interested. Hollywood never had any glamour for Lee Tracy until he became an actor, he revealed at Paramount today, where he is heading the cast of "You Belong to Me." "I seldom went to motion picture shows," Tracy said. "And I spent an entire summer in Long Beach the year before I became an actor without once thinking of Hollywood or even wanting to see the studios."

Don't Drop a Pin.

Patrons of Loew's Fox Theater are now being made the beneficiaries of the latest invention in the development of the public address system. William Boettcher, of Loew's New York organization, has just made the new installment at a reported cost of $10,000.

This new high fidelity, or wide range, system, as it is known, is the first in Washington. It consists of a sound reinforcement and crown system. The new mechanism provides a uniform sound volume throughout the theater. That is to say, patrons sitting in the last row of the top balcony can hear every word and every sound emanating from the screen with the same distinctness and clarity as those sitting in the front row of the orchestra.

The new system is said to be so sensitive that heart beats can be heard over it—provided, I presume, that the heart has a "murmur" or one cylinder missing.

Manager Hardie Meakin of RKO-Keith's Theater has changed his system. Instead of announcing a change in opening date of the attraction to follow the current Wheeler and Woolsey whimsy, "Cockeyed Cavalier," Manager Meakin has been content, this time, merely to change the attraction. The latest bulletin from Fifteenth street has it that the feature picture opening on Friday, July 6, will be "Let's Try Again," costarring Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, who already have scored together in "Cavalcade" and "Where Sinners Meet."

Leslie Howard and Bette Davis in "Of Human Bondage," by W. Somerset Maugham, originally announced for the week of July 6, we are assured will come along the following week, on July 13.

Seafowl Note.

The usual "noiseless Fourth" has already begun keeping the neighborhood awake at night, and awakening it too early in the morning out Gallatin street way, where, apparently, if it isn't wild rabbits to eat up your flower garden, it is high explosives to unravel this sleeve of care you're trying so desperately to knit up.

But, then, I have vague recollections—very vague—of having been a boy once myself. And did I pester those bedroom windows at 5 o'clock in the morning?

So, go ahead, kids—and I'll wring your darling little necks if I catch you!

She was awarded $3,000 and he $225. The suits followed an accident at the Bristol railroad crossing in Harrison County in 1932.

Orange Firemen Hold Annual Fair Tomorrow

Band music, baseball games and a parade of fire equipment will be added to the usual holiday features.

E. G. Smith Is Reelected Head of W. Va. U. Board

Morgantown, W. Va., July 2 (Spl.).—Edward Grandison Smith, Clarksburg lawyer, today was reelected president of the board of governors of West Virginia University.

D. A. Burt, Wheeling, was reelected vice president of the board, and Charles P. Neff, Jr., secretary. Neff also takes the place of Dennis M. Wills, former financial treasurer of the university, that office having been merged with the secretaryship. The board will pass on the school's annual budget.

West Virginia to Have Drum Corps Contest

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 2 (Spl.).—State officers of the American Legion announce that a drum corps contest for $1,650 in cash prizes will be held in connection with the annual convention of the West Virginia department of the body in September at Parkersburg.

Seventy-five legion posts in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia have been invited to send entries. Sports events on the program will include the first annual legion bowling tournament and a State softball championship series.

Reckless Drive Charge Follows Fatal Crash

Hagerstown, Md., July 2 (Spl.).—John J. Shellhammer, driver of a truck that crashed into another truck, in which accident Joseph L. Elgin was fatally hurt, will be charged with reckless driving, State's Attorney Lloyd Harshman announced today. Shellhammer will be given a hearing next Monday.

Shellhammer's truck hit the rear of the truck in which Elgin was a passenger, throwing Elgin out and causing injuries from which he died at the Washington County Hospital here.

Crippled Children's Fund Drive Planned

Fredericksburg, Va., July 2 (Spl.).—Preparations for the annual drive for funds by the Fredericksburg branch of the Richmond Crippled Children's Hospital have been started by Mrs. George L. Hunter, Jr., and Mrs. E. Carlton Carpenter, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the local organization.

More than 150 children were treated within the last year through the Fredericksburg branch. The organization maintains facilities in the Richmond Hospital for treatment of local child cripples, and conducts four clinics each year here under the direction of Dr. W. T. Graham, of Richmond, an orthopedic specialist.

The Lesser Evil

Walt Mason, Himself

Dead Men's Letters.

They're printing letters of Charles Dickens, that show his inner life, and how he bought eight pounds of chickens, and wrangled with his wife. They're laying bare the man's emotions, his triumphs and his care, they tell about the patent lotions he bought to grow new hair. The reader of these old epistles reads on with bulging eyes, and every now and then he whistles in anger and surprise. Somehow the trick seems rather rotten, to print them at this day, to dig up troubles long forgotten and put them on display. The ablest man writes silly letters when in a dizzy mood, and when he's shaken off life's fetters those letters should be stewed. They should be gathered ere he's planted, by relatives bereft, and when the final dirge is chanted there should be nothing left. Alas, when any great man's perished, and in the boneyard laid, his letters are raked up and cherished till time to make a trade. And in 10 years or 12 or 50 there comes an offer nice, and his descendants, prompt and thrifty, sell out and bank the price. Such letters now are uninviting because they're overripe; and we behold a great man writing the cheapest kind of tripe.

Asbury Rites Held At Scene of Death

Fredericksburg, Va., July 2 (Sp.). The consecration of Bishop Francis Asbury, pioneer Methodist clergyman and often termed the Father of American Methodism, was commemorated on the 150th anniversary of his induction by services conducted yesterday at the scene of his death, under auspices of the Fredericksburg Methodist Church.

The Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, former chaplain of the United States Senate, commended the bishop's life as an itinerant preacher for the Colonies during the Revolutionary period.

Services took place 17 miles south of here on the old Richmond-Washington highway at the marker which designates the site of the George Arnold home, where Bishop Asbury spent his last days. Members of the Fredericksburg congregation, officials of the Virginia Conference and groups from other denominations participated in the rites.

Memorial Is Held To Col. Saunders

Tappahannock, Va., July 2 (Sp.). The public service record of Col. John R. Saunders, for 16 years Attorney General of Virginia, was commended in addresses yesterday by Gov. Peery, Senator Byrd, former Gov. Pollard and Attorney General Abram P. Staples at memorial services held yesterday at the Essex County Courthouse.

The program was sponsored by the citizenship committee of the Essex County Woman's Club, co-operating with women's clubs from Middlesex, King, Queen and King Williams Counties. Miss L. R. W. Smith directed the day's events. Other speakers were Edwin H. Gibson, S. O. Bland, attorney; Judge George L. Browning and Judge E. Hugh Smith.

45 Licenses Granted For Bottled Beer Sale

Applications of 45 establishments for permission to sell light wines and beers in bottles in residential areas were unopposed yesterday at a hearing before the Liquor Control Board.

The original liquor law for the District forbade the issuance of licenses in these areas, but a subsequent amendment authorized the issuance. The applications heard yesterday were the first to be filed under authority of the amendment.

No Need for a Horse With Sons Like These

Not having a horse or an ox, W. H. Spaulding, of West Falls Church, Va., took a leaf from his history book and hitched his four sons, Raymond, Albert, Wilbur and Lester to the plow and planted his field of late potatoes. The oldest is about 13 years old.

Armed Bandit Takes $45 at Filling Station

An armed robber, on the pretense of obtaining a road map, sauntered into a filling station at Seventeenth street and Benning road northeast early yesterday, and forced the manager, Edward K. Walters, 26, to surrender $45; contents of a cash drawer.

The thug, described as a well-dressed white man, ordered Walters into a closet at the rear of the station and asked for a key to the door. The manager said the key was lost, and with a parting warning "not to move," the robber fled on foot.
